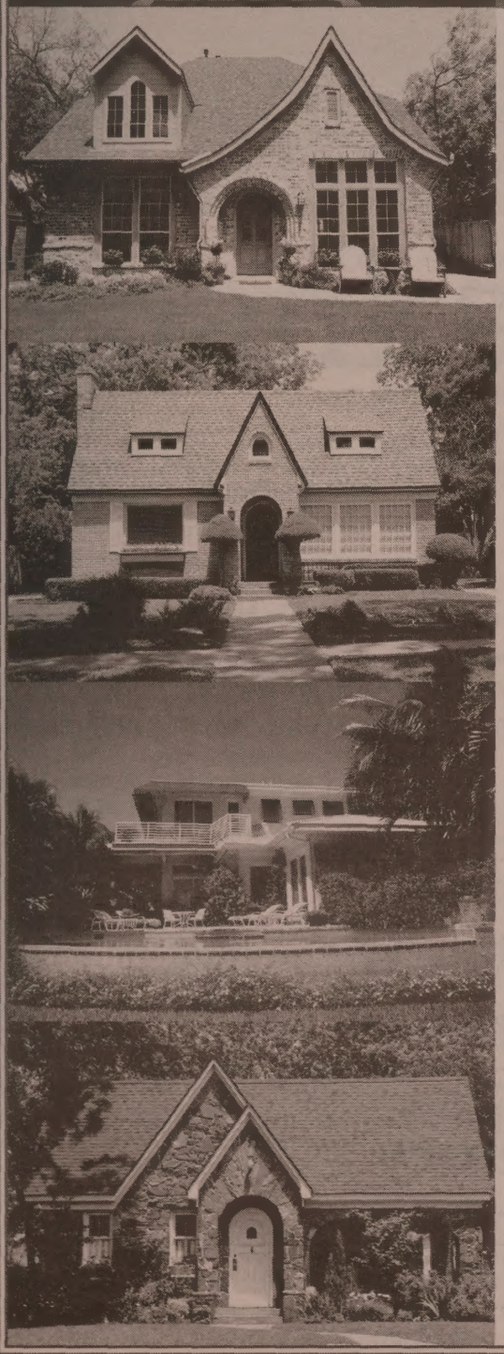
The most beautiful homes in Manhattan, The Hamptons, and Palm Beach have one thing in common. Us.

Ellen Bitton, President



And because we do one thing, and one thing only, we do it very well. In fact, when it comes to securing mortgages, people say we're the best. We'll get you the perfect mortgage. You may only need us once or twice in a lifetime. But when you do, we'll be there. Call us. You'll see. There's a lot more to mortgages than just numbers.

The Down Factory Store

www.downfactorystore.com

Thanksgiving Extravaganza

Thanks to our retail and "online" customers we are one of the largest resources for goose down comforters, pillows and featherbeds. Consumers that compare our quality and prices to those of department stores, discounters, catalogs and other web sites find that we are indeed unbeatable - and we guarantee that! Know the facts of down before you buy.

FACT: Down comes from the chest of the bird to keep it insulated from the weather. Feathers (those things with quills) come from the back of the bird to keep it dry. Down can cost as much as $10.00 an ounce, feathers 10¢ an ounce. Over 90% of down manufacturers find it to their advantage to add over 30% feathers to their down. It's like buying three pounds of ground sirloin and getting two pounds of meat and one pound of fat. You have paid for meat and got fat, it's the same with their down, they both do it because it's legal. We do not contaminate our down by adding feathers to it.

KNOW THE FACTS BEFORE YOU BUY IT

FACT: Fill power, this is the amount the cubic inches filled by one ounce of down. Higher fill power means a higher quality down. You will find that as the quality of the down increases, so does the comfort & life of the item.

FACT: We use only high thread count, baffle box construction, 100% cotton covers on our down comforters & pillows. Down insulates by trapping air and holding in your body temperature, keeping you comfortable through the night. Low quality comforters are usually heavier because it takes more of an inferior down to fill a comforter. Inferior down becomes clumpy and it can't breath, resulting in your becoming over heated and uncomfortable. Our high quality down gives you the warmth and comfort without the weight.

FACT: In all likelihood you will have your comforter longer than the car you are now driving.

"We go the distance for you."

Thanksgiving History

Spam, Fried Waffles And How East Enders Killed The Last Dinosaur

By Dan Rattiner

Everyone knows how Thanksgiving got started in America. The Pilgrims landed, were met by the Indians, and then had a huge sit-down dinner to celebrate.

"We're so glad you're here," the chief of the Indians said, raising a glass of spiced wampum. "You've had a long journey."

"Hear, hear," the Pilgrims said. They still had British accents in those days.

The adults danced and made merry, the old wise Indians smoked a peace pipe and the children ran around and played ring around a larie oh.

The main course served at this big sit-down was not turkey as it is today — I'll get to that. It was baked dinosaur. This was a very long time ago.

About a hundred years after this first big sit down dinner, some of the Pilgrims were sitting around remembering it fondly. They remembered the reinforced picnic tables that were used — the baked dinosaurs were very, very heavy — and they remembered the corn, the cranberry sauce, the stuffing, the crunchy BBQ chips made from the dinosaur plates that stuck up from the ridge of their backs — a delicacy — and especially, they remembered all the camaraderie and the dancing and how they bought the land.

"I remember we bought the whole state of Massachusetts for a fur coat and some beads," one of the Pilgrims said.

"And a shilling," another Pilgrim said. "They really liked that coin."

At this time, ten-acre lots were selling for forty thousand shillings in Massachusetts. There were forty million ten-acre lots in Massachusetts.

After that, for the next ten years at Thanksgiving time the settlers here on Long Island had peanut butter and jelly sandwiches and waffles.

The first Pilgrim raised his glass of wampum. An Indian appeared, and filled it. "You know, we really ought to remind ourselves once a year how lucky we are to have found this place. We should have a celebration of some sort."

"We really are lucky," the other Pilgrim said.

"Yes, we are."

The first Pilgrim motioned for the Indian to leave the room, which he did, backwards, taking little steps.

"Why don't we have a big sit down like we did all those years ago. Sort of celebrate what we had at that first dinner. Stuffing, cranberry sauce, what was that other thing, lima beans?"

"Corn."

"Of course, dinosaur will be a little hard to come by."

"Remember those chips?"

A hunt was organized and the men went out and sure enough could not find any dinosaurs. What they did find, however, were turkeys. Lots of them. Earlier on there had always been a shortage of turkeys, because all the turkeys were fed to the dinosaurs. Dinosaurs considered the turkeys a delicacy and said so. They wagged their tails. And spit fire.

"Where are the dinosaurs?" one of the hunter Pilgrims asked out in the woods, knee deep in turkeys.

There weren't any. Not a single one in all of Massachusetts.

Dunehampton vs. The Hamlet of Sagaponack

By Roy Scheider

I live in Sagaponack, at the beach, and want to live nowhere else. Sagaponack is a real place, with a look, a tradition and an attitude. A good one, I believe. Dunehampton is an anomaly, a confusion of ideas I felt were necessary for me to accept in order to save my house. But now, the thought of a separate "gold coast" seems appalling. If my voice and the voices of my neighbors can be respected by the town board I'd like to see a commission formed, to nourish and protect the beach. Let the town of Southampton be realistic about the most attractive aspect of this whole community — the beach. If the town doesn't wake up, a new village of Sagaponack can be formed. Maybe it should be formed anyway.

The Pilgrims had the big reunion dinner where they sat down and all talked about the real estate killings they had made over the years. A few people said they missed the dinosaur chips, but then there was a new delicacy that was a big hit — deep fried turkey wattles.

At this dinner, the Indians, the few of them were still left, ate at a smaller table in another room in silence. They ate Spam. Sliced and microwaved. Occasionally, the Pilgrims rang a dinner bell. One of the Indians would get up, snort and stalk off to see what the damn Pilgrims wanted this time.

News of the big reunion dinner, and the plans to recreate it every year, spread all through the colonies. Here on Long Island, folks learned about it from the stagecoach driver delivering the mail. But they got it wrong. And so they sat down for that first Thanksgiving dinner here on the East End and ate deep fried waffles.

"This is pretty good," one of the settlers said, trying to be polite. "But I don't know about the maple syrup and the baked dinosaur chips. Kinda gross."

You see, the settlers here on the eastern end of Long Island killed the very last dinosaur on the planet Earth for their first Thanksgiving dinner. Environmentalists were outraged.

"This is the worst thing that has happened since the beginning of time," one of them said to a settler.

"Was it a male or a female?" the settler asked.

"What difference does THAT make?" the environmentalist cried.

As for the deep fried waffles, the settlers thought they were supposed to replace the lima beans. What did they know?

After that, for the next ten years at Thanksgiving time the settlers here on Long Island had peanut butter and jelly sandwiches and waffles. They still had it wrong. After that, the people in Amagansett and Montauk stuck with the peanut butter and jelly, but the people in Bridgehampton and Westhampton Beach ate hot dogs with catsup and mustard. Only the people in East Hampton and Southampton gave up on the deep fried waffles and announced that it was supposed to be turkey, and they were eating THAT.

As I am sure you know, the Hundred Years Thanksgiving Food War here on Long Island was a disgrace for everybody. At some point, hot scallops were thrown at visitors and soup got poured down chimneys. On another occasion, people exchanged gifts. After the Hundred Years, and for the next two years, the residents of Quogue ate only sushi at Thanksgiving, saying that Magellan had traveled east to find India and he had mistaken the original inhabitants of Long Island for Indians, which they weren't. Or were. So we should celebrate by eating food from the Pacific Rim. Authorities finally squashed the sushi rebellion.

In the most recent decade, because of the high divorce rate, Thanksgiving has become a three-day holiday. On Thursday, the kids have dinner at their mother's. On Friday, the kids have dinner at their father's. And on Saturday, they eat by themselves, ordering Chinese food while their mothers and fathers visit with their lawyers.

Today, the traditional Thanksgiving dinner here on Long Island consists of Montauk clam chowder, fresh North Fork broccoli salad, a white Chardonnay from the East End vineyard of your choice, Montauk sea bass, Sagaponack potatoes au gratin, Iacono's free-range chicken, Shinnecock Nation sweet corn and samp, baked Water Mill apple pudding, Tate's chocolate chip cookies, fresh picked strawberries from Mecox and capuccino from the Starbucks in Bridgehampton, with a shot of Scotch whiskey.

The settlers came from England after all, and what with Scotland being part of England, well, you get the idea.

House Call

Talking To My House In East Hampton About Taking Its Telephone Away

By Dan Rattiner

This week, there are some new laws about cell phones. You don't have to sign up with a phone company for a year if you don't want to. You can keep your cell phone number if you switch from one company to another. And if you want to, you can give your cell phone the same number as your house phone. I think the first two rules are pretty good. But I don't know about the house phone rule. So I thought I'd ask.

"You want me to share your number?" my house said.

"No. I want my number to be also my number at the house," I said.

"What about MY calls?" the house asked.

"Well, then I'll get them."

"I don't want you to get all my calls. There are certain calls I get that are private."

"I don't know of any private calls you got."

"Exactly. And what about all those calls I handle for your kids? Or your girlfriend?"

"When people want to reach THEM, they call THEIR cell phones."

"Not all the time. Sometimes they call the house. I put it through."

"This way they wouldn't call the house."

"But that's part of my job. You trying to take away part of my job?"

FLOWER SELLERS INVADE THE HAMPTONS

By Dan Rattiner

There seem to be a whole lot more flowers being sold out of the backs of automobiles on the sides of the Montauk Highway this autumn. It's kind of a nice thing. Every few hundred yards, there are yellow sunflowers, red roses, clusters of white chrysanthemums. As everybody knows, women love flowers, and men love to give them to women because, as the phrase goes, "When Momma Ain't Happy Then Ain't Nobody Happy."

The sudden appearance of these cars with their flowers, mostly sold by young men, has raised the ire of local florists, who claim that the selling of these flowers is unfair competition.

"There are laws against this," one of them recently told me. "There's no soliciting allowed on the Highway without a permit. But it's the holiday season. And there's lots of people about and lots of cars on the roads. So they swoop in, park and unload maybe twenty bunches. Then in fifteen minutes they sell them out and they pack up and move out. Where are they from? Why have they come here?"

Why they have come here, of course, is to make a buck. Or, maybe it is to help keep people together. Around Thanksgiving and Christmas traditionally, women get particularly emotional and fuzzy wuzzy. And men who traditionally forget birthdays and anniversaries and holidays need to see this.

"Oh yeah, gotta bring home some flowers."

I'm told that some of those opposed to this activity have gone to the trouble to find out where these people have come from. They stop and buy a bunch, and engage the seller in conversation. They ask. Ronkonkoma, they are told. There's a central point where you go to pick up the flowers and, at the end of the day, return with the money. There's also a point out east, a "warehouse" in the Hamptons to get more flowers. It's very organized.

"Do they have a lookout?" I asked.

"We don't know."

Turns out the authorities aren't doing much about this problem, at least yet. As long as it is just somebody selling a few flowers out of the back of a car, they really aren't go-

"Well, it gets rid of the middle man."

"How am I supposed to keep track of things around here if I don't get calls, if I don't have a phone?"

"That's a point."

"You know you just take me for granted sometimes. Remember when I recorded that fire alarm call at one in the morning when you were out?"

"It was a false alarm call."

"Yeah, but the system worked. The alarm went off. The security company called me. I left that message. I had them call you on your cell phone."

"They had my cell phone number. They just tried calling the house first."

"You think I had nothing to do with it? What about this morning? Your son in Boston called to say goodbye because he's going to visit your daughter in San Francisco. How would you have known about it?"

"He did call me on my cell phone."

"I need a phone. Why don't you just get a second phone and put your cell phone number on THAT?"

"Redundant. And we can't afford it."

"Bottom line is, it's important I have a phone. I won't give it up."

"We'll see about that."

"How about you just think about it?" the house said.

"Okay."

The next morning, the house called. I was at work at the time.

It called me on the cell phone.

"Could you call that professional guy that cleans my windows twice a year and ask him to come? I look terrible."

"It's that time?"

"Have you tried to look out the windows lately? Oh, and your sister called."

"All right, all right. You can keep your phone."

"And somebody else called, but they hung up without leaving their name. But I got it on caller ID."

"Thanks."

ing to make a fuss about it. Kids sometimes run lemonade stands. Sometimes you see men selling corn or clams or fish out of the backs of cars, and nobody does anything about it.

Personally, I don't think men buy enough flowers for their women. They might do it once every two weeks, if they remember to. They really should do it every day. You can't bring women too many flowers, in my opinion. They clap their hands together. They say — for me? They never, ever get used to having their men bring them flowers. Doesn't have to be a big deal. Could be just one single flower.

I've often asked why flowers make them so happy. They don't know, they say. But flowers are so pretty.

I think that the owners of places that sell flowers, the florists, the delis and supermarkets, should take a whole different approach to the selling of flowers along the Montauk Highway. They should consider selling flowers on the Highway to be a way to increase market share of male disposable income. Flood the Highway with flowers for sale. Price them at three dollars a bunch.

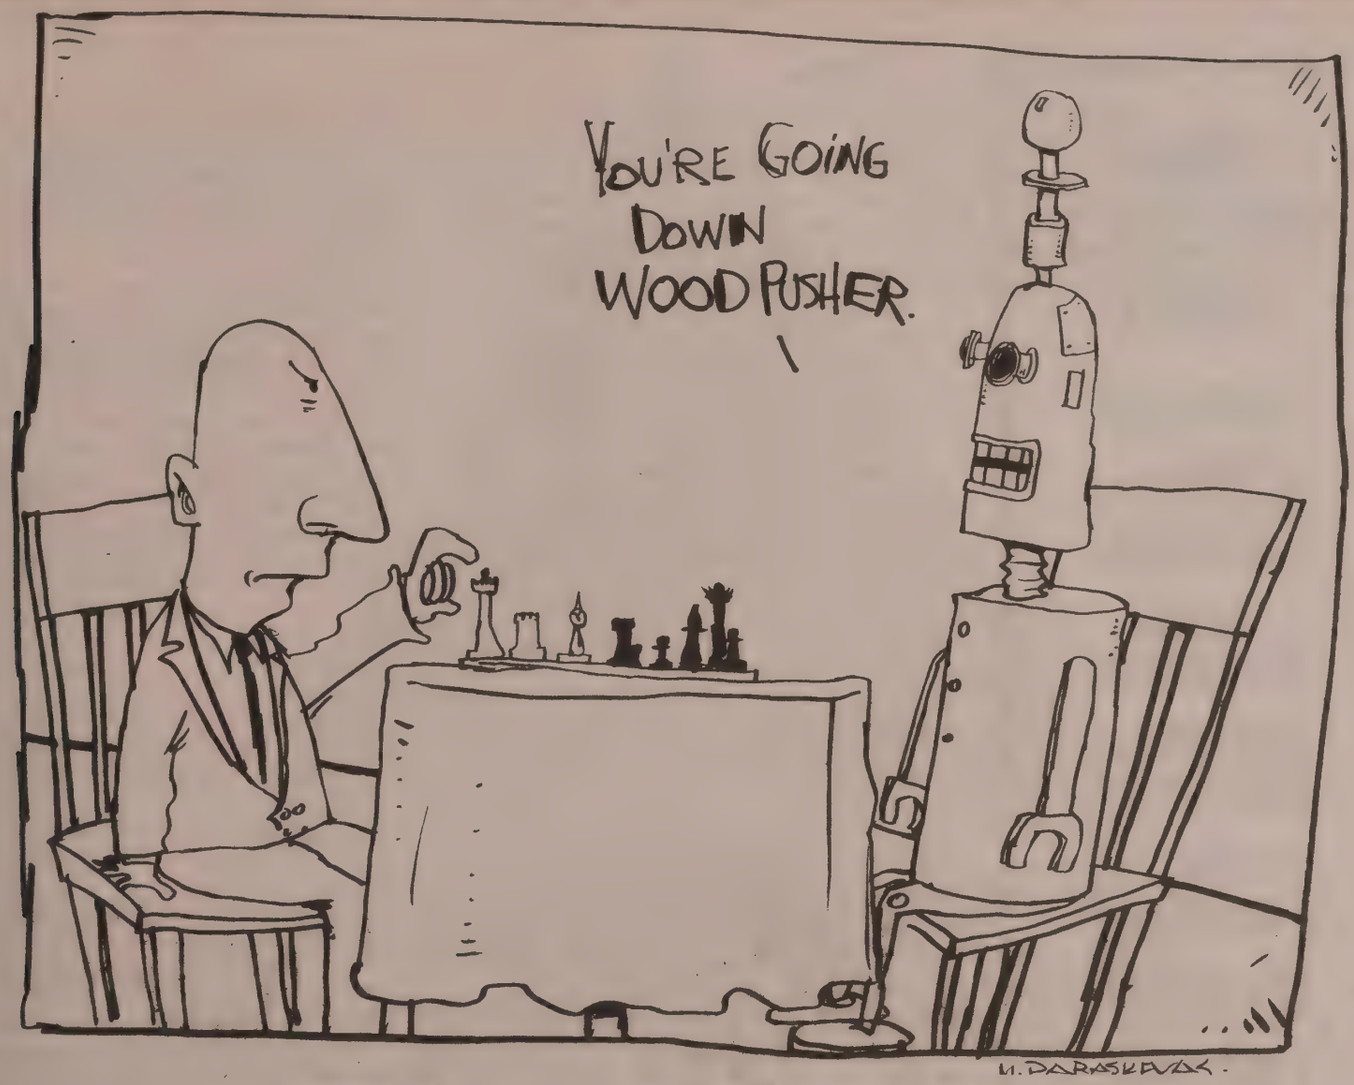
The amount of flowers being sold will soar. Many men — I know this is hard to believe —still haven't gotten the message about women and flowers. And they have an inablility to remember anything like this. If this all happens, the idea of buying flowers might occur more often — up from once every two weeks to once every other day or so. So maybe the number of flowers sold will increase sixfold.

Then the media will get hold of what is happening. The marketing genius in Ronkonkoma will appear on the cover of Time Magazine. All around the country flower sales will soar. There will be a temporary shortage, but then whole new fields will be planted and brought to harvest. Soon the whole planet will bloom. Women will be so happy. Men will be so happy. War will end.

And Earth will be the model planet for the whole universe. Creatures will go glide into Earth orbit aboard their alien ships.

"Oh! Oh! It's so beautiful!"

"Not long ago it was just blue and green. We don't know WHAT happened."



Zip Chess

How To Watch The 4 Hour Kasparov vs. X3D Fritz Chess Match On ESPN2

By Dan Rattiner

I have found an excellent way to watch chess on TV.

Chess on TV, you say? I didn't know there was such a thing. Well, there is, if you go to some of the lesser cable channels. On Monday, November 18 at one o'clock in the afternoon on ESPN2, for example, there was a match between Gary Kasparov of Russia and Computer X3D Fritz, broadcast from the New York Racquet Club in Manhattan. Four hours were set aside for it. Kasparov would get $250,000 if he lost, $300,000 if he tied, and $350,000 if he won. If the computer won, he, or his developers, would get bragging rights.

Seemed fair to me.

It's true that chess matches are not shown on TV very often. They broadcast the world championship match when it takes place, which is every four years. And they broadcast a match whenever Gary Kasparov, the current world champion, accepts an offer to play a chess computer. He's done this three times in the last ten years.

This is not exactly as often as they broadcast, for example, hockey, on television. And many people will say it is often enough. It probably is. Who wants to watch people stare at a chessboard for forty minutes without moving? It has all the excitement and tension of water dripping, really.

He has no trouble beating PEOPLE. He beats them just sitting there. He scowls at them. He stares at them.

And I don't know much about chess. I know the moves. The castle goes up and down and sideways. The bishop goes on an angle and so forth and so on. But I do not know good chess from bad. I just like the drama of it, particularly how it is reported in the New York Times. They describe a championship chess match about once a week.

"After 17...Ne7, it would have been unproductive for Bartlesman to play 18cb Bc8, for Smirnov would regain his pawn after 19 ra4 Bd7. Bartlesman was way, way ahead at this point and heading for sure victory but suddenly, he pulls this incredible blunder. Rb8. And now, his King pinned down and his Queen gone, his remaining bishop cornered and his last pawn gone, he bursts into tears and, with great bitterness, resigns."

Of course, it is one thing to read all this angst and sturm und drang in the Times. That takes about eight minutes. In reality, this drama takes place for just a few seconds during the four hours of water dripping. Well, who would want to watch this?

Well, me. Reputations rise and fall during this matches. The matches are listened to on radios around the world, by tens of millions of people. Except in America. In America, we work. For me to watch this match on a Monday afternoon for four hours would be close to impossible. I haven't got four hours. And I have to be at work on Monday.

The answer to this, of course, if I'm really this nuts, is to tape it to watch it later. The standard way to do this is with a VCR, but then you have to be there at the start to press record, because who can figure out the timer? Not me. I'm not leaving work to go home just to record a chess match. However, one of my kids was at home. Maybe he would tape it at the appropriate time. I called him and he said he would.

Here was my plan. I would put it on and fast forward it through all those minutes of staring at the board, to just those moments when Kasparov or the computer actually move. I can watch a four hour chess match this way in thirty minutes. And so that's what I did.

At 8 a.m. on Saturday morning, November 22, I tiptoed down to the living room, picked up the remote, sat down on the couch and turned on the chess match my son had recorded four days earlier. The house was quiet. This was my time.

"And so this is Kasparov's fourth match with a computer," an announcer was saying. "He defeated IBM's Deep Blue in 1996, lost to an improved Deep Blue in 1999 and battled the Israeli computer chess champion, Deep Junior, to a draw this past February."

"And of course, the computers are just getting better and better," another announcer said. "I'm told that X3D Fritz has memorized three MILLION moves."

"And Kasparov always seems to not do well with computers. Although lately he is getting better."

"Well, he sort of has to be getting better. He has no trouble beating PEOPLE. He beats them just sitting there. He scowls at them. He stares at them. And he did try that technique with Deep Blue. But the computer doesn't care about that. So now he is trying it differently."

"Well, here he comes now."

The scene changed from the ESPN2 Sports desk to the interior of a ballroom in the New York Racquet Club. There were people in the audience. A table on a stage under one of the grand ballroom chandeliers. Then through a door at the back came Kasparov, confident and dapper in a three-piece suit. Why was he wearing a three-piece suit? The computer wasn't going to care about a three-piece suit.

I pressed fast forward and he did a quick jig up to the table and sat down. There was a chess board on the table. And on the other side of the chess board a computer screen. I looked for the computer. Must be there somewhere. I pressed pause. Then slow motion. Nope. There was a referee and a few other gentlemen in suits. People shook hands, very, very, very slowly. I pressed PLAY.

"...so this is the deciding game," the announcer was saying. He was off screen. A voice over. "They are tied at this point. One win each and one draw. So it is winner take all."

"Kasperov looks extremely relaxed and confident," the other announcer said. "I guess he should be. The computer made an absolutely amateur move in the middle of the last game. Something had gone horribly wrong. And

Food Pyramid

Ever Wonder What Is On The Back Side Of The Food Pyramid? Ice Cream!

By Dan Rattiner

People are so ignorant about what they ought to eat to stay thin. Out in California, a British-born attorney, Steven Joseph, has filed a multi-million dollar lawsuit against the Kraft food company, claiming they owe him because Oreo cookies are filled with something called trans-fat. Experts say trans-fat is inedible.

Kraft has issued a press release proudly announcing the production of their 450 billionth Oreo cookie. They began making them in 1912. Sometime next month, they say, the 200 billionth person will eat an Oreo cookie, and they intend to make a big deal about it. Hopefully it won't be Steven Joseph.

"I have been in this country for two years," Mr. Joseph wrote in his lawsuit. "I am filled with trans-fat because of Kraft and their Oreo cookies. I had no idea they were made with this inedible material."

Joseph cites a California law which states that if a manufacturer knowingly sells a food product that contains an unsafe ingredient consumers are unlikely to know about, then the manufacturer has to take responsibility for it.

The lawsuit made only the slightest dent in the general consciousness of the American public, who drives up and down our highways, passing or stopping at Burger Kings, Taco Bells, McDonalds and Wendy's every day. Nevertheless, the lawsuit was the subject of a poll taken by America Online. Users were asked if they thought 1. the lawsuit was a good idea, 2. a useless exercise but 'we have to do something' or 3. 'forget it and bring on the Double Stuff Oreos.' 73% voted for number 3 and the Double Stuff. 23% said we had to do something. And only 4% said the lawsuit was a good idea. Bring on the Double Stuff. The hell with trans-fat.

Also, there are hot fudge sundaes, chocolate cheesecake with whipped cream, bologna sandwiches and Count Chocula Breakfast cereal.

Part of the problem, in my opinion, is the complete failure by either the government, doctors, dieticians or the food industry to make it clear what we ought not to eat, what we ought to eat and how much we ought to eat. They have presented to the American public something they call the Food Pyramid, which shows large quantities of fruits and vegetables at the bottom, grains and breads one layer up, dairy products one level above that, and at the top, this small thing of sugars and condiments.

What nobody seems to notice, shockingly, is that they never actually show the pyramid. What they show is a triangle. This is perfectly obvious to anyone who knows anything about mathematics and geometry. What we are looking at here has only two dimensions, not three. So it's like the moon, which travels around the Earth always facing us, so that we know everything about the face we see and nothing about the back side we don't see. No wonder the food pyramid drives people crazy.

The truth is that such things as Double Stuff Oreo cookies are on the other side of the pyramid. I've been there. I've seen it. Also, there are hot fudge sundaes, chocolate cheesecake with whipped cream, bologna sandwiches and Count Chocula Breakfast cereal. There's even a pickle over there.

How our government thinks that we can do anything about this epidemic of obesity in America by showing us just the front side of the food pyramid is beyond me. This is one of those stupid, stupid things, like the Roadmap to Peace. Have you ever seen the Roadmap to Peace? I have a Roadmap to New Jersey and a Roadmap of Long Island. But I have never, ever seen a Roadmap to Peace.

That's my story and I'm sticking to it.

The Bride and Groom

Dune Church Wedding

Lara Spencer Marries David Haffenreffer At Southampton's Dune Church

By Lara Spencer Haffenreffer

Like most women, I began thinking about my wedding day when I was, oh, maybe seven years old. I would try to imagine who the lucky guy would be, what I would wear, and what month it should take place, though the month changed quite often, depending on the kind of bridesmaid dress I thought was "cool" at the time.

When I was eight, I thought all the girls should be in hot pink; by ten, I wanted them each in a different color of the rainbow (thankfully I grew out of that look); and, as a moody teenager, it was black velvet and blood red roses for everyone...including the bride!!! The only thing that remained constant about my dreamy wedding fantasy throughout all those years was WHERE I would get married.

It would be a quaint little church nestled in the dunes, with beautiful stained glass windows, and simple, carved wooden pews. It was close enough to the ocean that you could hear the waves crashing and smell the salt air, yet it was elegant, and not too "beachy." It was a place my mother had told me about. She visited St. Andrews on a day trip from our hometown of Garden City, and I never forgot the way she lit up when she described it.

Years later, when I bought a home in the village of Southampton, I became a member of that church. When I got engaged, my fiancé and I began attending every Sunday that we were out east. But Father, I must confess.

Initially, my motivation had nothing to do with being close to God.. It was actually about securing the perfect backdrop for my wedding pictures. But ultimately, as we listened to the Reverend Peter Larson talk about compassion, trust, and kindness each week, this changed. We realized the BIG picture was so much more important than the

US CONSTITUTION LAW MAY SAVE DUNE CHURCH

By Robin F. Smith

There may be good news for those behind the effort to save St. Andrews Dune Church in Southampton Village from potential destruction at the hands of the coastal elements. An attorney representing the church revealed to the Trustees a short time ago that two federal statutes provide special consideration to religious institutions in zoning matters.

Known as the Special Benefits Doctrine and the Religious Land Use Doctrine, both edicts – one an addendum to the First Amendment, the other a federal statute – state that in zoning matters, if local regulations run against the plans of a religious institution, the regulations should yield.

The church first applied for a stone revetment more than a year ago, and a decision has not been made; currently, no hard structures can be built on the beach. Southampton Village Zoning Board of Appeals and the Village Trustees are concerned that if they make an exception in this case, they will be bombarded with applications for new protective structures from all sorts of coastline properties. Again, proponents of the plan say that the circumstances surrounding the historic church are unique and warrant special considerations.

However, the attorney, Anthony Tohill, has offered the Trustees the opportunity to include in the approval agreement a caveat stating that "but for the religious status and but for the Special Benefit Doctrine, and the

As a result, the Sunday ritual of going to the service at St. Andrews Dune Church, followed by a walk on the beach, is still one of the most cherished memories of our courtship.

At 4 p.m on September 30th, 2000, David Haffenreffer and I were married at St. Andrews. The day was perfect. Sunny, 70 degrees, with not a cloud in the sky. The arched doorway to little red church was decorated with daisies and hydrangeas, my favorites, and as the children's choir sang, so did my heart. None of my girlish fantasies could have compared to that magical afternoon when I married the love of my life. We asked Peter to speak to our families and friends about the history of the church. How it started life in the late 19th century as a lifesaving station for the Coast Guard, and how it is still a place where people are saved today, a little less dramatically maybe, but still profoundly.

When the ceremony ended, we led our 140 guests down the block to the beach where we had spent so many Sunday afternoons. After they all took off their shoes and raised a glass to the newlyweds, David and I made our own toast.

To St. Andrews.

Religious Land Use Doctrine" the application would not be granted," thus impeding a precedent.

Church officials have argued the two bulkheaded properties on either side of the church have exacerbated erosion on the property, leaving it especially vulnerable to the ocean's power. Linking the two existing bulkheads to form a permanent protective barrier for the historic property would not worsen any erosion already caused by them, they assert. In the larger picture, they worry that the church's location, between the dunes at the head of Lake Agawam, makes it a likely candidate for a breach that could flood the village's business district in a bad storm.

Karin Yapalater

Author

By Dan Rattiner

Karin Yapalater is a young Manhattan mother, the wife of a physician, and a resident of Manhattan's West Side and Bridgehampton where she keeps two horses. Besides that, she thought she would try her hand at writing a novel.

Her first novel, a classic who-dunnit, was published by William Morrow this summer with great fanfare. Yapalater went on a tour around the country that culminated with an appearance on the Today Show. Her book party in Manhattan, almost an open-arm welcome into the literary community, was held at Elaine's. Here in the Hamptons it took place at the home of Michael and Marcy Warren of Water Mill, with many well-wishers in attendance. And the book has been a success. Not only with the number of copies sold, but also with reviewers. Harriet Klausner called it "a superb psychological police procedural that rips into the world of analysts, especially those who use patients for sexual pleasure." Stuart Woods, the author of Dirty Work, had this to say. "Karin Yapalater's novel An Hour to Kill is refreshingly imagined, tightly written and keenly observed. It will shorten any airline flight by half and give you something to think about during the cab ride home."

Yapalater is a vibrant, attractive woman in her thirties who came from a lower middle class suburban background to find success in the literary world in Manhattan. En route, she took detours to Moscow, a Cambodian refugee camp, Paris and several other locations. She told me about her life in an interview I had with her in my office not long ago.

"I grew up in Rockland County, in Spring Valley, which is near Muncey and Nyack. My father drove a truck and a cab and was a James Dean sort of guy. My mother raised her kids and then went back to work as an office manager.

"I always wanted to be a writer. When I was four, I started writing stories about everybody in my family. Outside, there was a lot of open land. This was a very rural area. So I stayed home a lot, got to know imaginary friends and imaginary characters, and I developed a very rich imagination. My mind was my playground."

Karin went to Spring Valley High School and then was accepted at Rockland County Community College. She spent her first year there and was recognized as an extraordinary student interested in the literary life by two professors, Dr. Henry Laram and Dr. Dan Masterson. She received a scholarship to study at St. George's in London the following year.

"I lived in the homes of English families, studied four days a week and spent three days a week in Paris and Amsterdam. With some friends, I bought an old Singer Gazelle and drove to Greece and back. I picked tulips to make the money to get back home. All together, I was there a little over a year."

In New York, Karin rented a fourth floor walkup at 85th and First Avenue where she lived for awhile, she said, on celery sticks, carrots and jelly omelets. She got a job at Seventeen Magazine as an assistant to the Fashion Editor where she wrote copy, went on shoots, picked out clothes for models and generally did organizational work.

After that she spent two years working at Bantam Books International Division, then, after reading a piece about UNESCO, packed up and went back to Paris to "live, write, starve and freeze."

At this point she was, by her own account, broke, still dreaming of writing — short stories — she said, but she had to put food on the table. And so she got a job working for a public relations firm that did work for Studio 54, the Nederlander Theatre Chain and others.

"I got to go to a lot of Broadway show openings," she said.

She met the man who was to become her husband in a loft on 13th Street. She was there to be interviewed by him about taking a house share on Fire Island. During the conversation, they discovered they had lived within two blocks of each other in Paris. He had been there as a medical student. But they had never met.

"It was love at first sight. He told me he would be leaving in a few months for the Thai-Cambodian border to help the sick in a refugee camp and wondered if I would like to accompany him there and help too. I said sure."

As it turned out, Dr. Greg Yapalater went ahead. A short time later, she followed. The plane landed in Bangkok, and she took a bus into the jungle to get to her destination.

"During the ride, a soldier whacked my knees with a billy club. I had put my knees up to get more comfortable. This wasn't allowed."

The refugee camp was, perhaps, the place where Karin became a grown up. She was there about six months, in a bamboo hospital, attached to the International Rescue Committee, tending to the wounded, the dying and the dead in the ongoing war. During that time, she and Greg took numerous side trips, tending the sick in India, the Celebes Islands and Morocco.

"Wherever we go, he helps out," she said of Greg. "In Bali, as we got off the boat, he bumps into HIS pediatrician."

Greg and Karin were married and moved into a loft on 13th Street.

"I called him Brittanica," she said. "He's good to have around to answer questions."

After some time on 13th Street, an incident happened that prompted the couple to move. During the night, while they slept in a bedroom with the door closed and the air conditioner on, a burglar entered the apartment through a living room window and made off with jewelry and clothing. In the morning, they

The Sheltered Islander By Sally Flynn

Observations of an Islander #276
The Tofu Stops Here

An actor is running a state with the fifth largest economy in the world, wacky Iraqi's are terrorizing our troops, Michael Jackson might still have enough money to buy himself out of this jam, Paris Hilton is upset because horrible people are circulating copies of her having sex with who cares and now the vegetarians are pushing Tofurkey, tofu molded flat on a platter into the shape of a turkey, for Thanksgiving. And for this I got up this morning?

Ya know, I'm a lifelong non-smoker and I am totally against prohibiting smoking in bars, Why? Because some things, like smoking and drinking, just go together. Thanksgiving, and a dead, plucked, washed, guts pulled out and stuffed back in, wrapped in a plastic net with a loop bag, turkey, just go together...

What is the big deal about the slaughter of innocent turkeys? Do they have something better to do other than lie on my plate with their legs in the air? Does one of them have the solution for world peace? Are they doing stem cell research on their farms? Do they know who shot Kennedy?

The vegetarians have to show me what God's plan for turkey was other than to be dinner. If the vegetarians are religious and trying to protect God's creatures then they should re-read story of Noah and the ark. Noah brought dozens of turkeys onto the ark and when one of them inquired of Noah, "Wherefore Noah, doth thou bringest so many of us on this boatus giganticus?"

Noah uttered the famous line, which later became a movie, "It will take many of you turkeys to guessest who cometh to dinner." And let's not forget, it was St. Pepperidge of Farms who taught the early Christians the benefits of eating turkey. Why? Because they were sick of lamb.

When the Pilgrims first hired a Feast Planner, they chose the turkey package for only sixpence a head. The boar was ten pence a serving, and the groundhog was twelve pence a serving because no one wanted it unground, which would have been only four pence a serving, if you could keep it from crawling off your plate. So, it was turkey, put here by God, for dinner.

You will note that at no point in time did God invent tofu. Tofu was invented hundreds of years later by poor people looking at bean froth and saying, "Looks like crap, but maybe if we compress it, we can eat it." Turkeys did not invent tofu, which proves my point about how stupid they are. If they were proactive in their own survival, they would have invented Tofurkey years ago instead of leaving it till now, when the world is too distracted by terrorism to digest much else.

I do not wish to look at a Jell-O mold Tofurkey lying in the middle of a Thanksgiving table. It will splatter all over the guests when it is hit with the electric knife. And nobody wants a scoop of "turkey." A scoop of mashed potatoes, yes. A scoop of ice cream, yes. A scoop of tofurkey, no. It's just wrong.

Here's my solution. Send Arnold to deal with the wacky Iraqi's, make Michael Jackson have sex with Paris Hilton on tape, make the vegetarians watch the tape until they lose their Tofurkey. Let the smokers, the drinkers, the druggers, the obese, the bulimic, the gamblers, the dead beat dads, and all the other sinners and saints of America have just one lousy day where we don't have to count calories, grams, fats, carbs, or be politically correct about anything. Let us hurl Tofurkey to the depths of insipid vegetarianism from whence it came.

Let us flagrantly mix church and state and proclaim this a country blessed by God. Let us sit together, use real butter and salt all day, and say, "Praise the Lord and pass the gravy!"

Authors Writing About The Hamptons

"Below is an excerpt from a chapter in my upcoming book Who I Am Keeps Happening, which the main character, Gully, loses her virginity on the beach to her boyfriend, Marshall. They are both almost 16 years old. As I surfed at Ditch Plains in Montauk during the time I was writing this book, I imagined a bay beach called Skim Beach."

Below the Slippery Surfaces

By Stacey Donovan

Even if you see it all the time, what is phenomenal about the sea is that it's never the same. Today Skim Beach swelled, big and bottle green, the waves charging into each other as though the water wanted to drown itself. Last time it had been a calm sheet of gray blue, like a wet version of an afternoon sky.

Marshall was nowhere in sight — nobody was. It was late enough that people had gone home to barbecue or to crowd into town. That didn't mean Marshall wasn't here yet. The section of the beach that the town maintained during the season was closest to the entrance, so these days it was mostly flat and empty of anything but shells and sand, sand, sand. Beside it, blankets of pebbles and stones began at the tide line, then the rocks started to pile up on the beach, big enough so that your arms outstretched didn't even reach halfway around. The rocks surrounded some huge stone slabs, as mysterious as if they'd dropped out of the sky. The slabs had been smoothed by years of salt and storms, some lying on top of each other in the sand — some side by side with enough space between them for a person to hide.

That's where Marshall would be. We'd come here since we were kids, because you could disappear between the stone slabs, pretend they were caves. I walked closer, away from the jetty, which was the last part of the beach. I was still shaky. The jetty was about a quarter-mile away on the opposite side of the entrance. I narrowed my eyes against the wind the same way that girl Grace had when she looked at me at the ice-cream store, but the jetty was empty. I watched the water for a minute, looking for signs of dolphins — the way their blowhole squirts as they surface really gives them away. It's not that I actually expected to see any here in the bay, but, you know, if they found their way to the Hudson, they might turn up anywhere.

"Marshall!" I called out. Once, then twice.

Something glinted by the caves. Marshall's glasses. The sun had lost its glare, but there was still light enough to reflect. I saw his arm waving. I walked fast. Not wanting to slip, I climbed over the first mossy boulder carefully, remembering to look down. I kept climbing and then there was Marshall, below the slippery surfaces, between a pair of long rocks, an old blanket beneath him, leaning back on his elbows.

"Hey!" I was out of breath.

"Hey yourself."

He'd taken his glasses off, which made everything different — even between us. Nothing in the way of us getting closer. Did he feel that way too? The wind was biting at my eyes.

"Gettin' chilly up there. Not here though." He patted the blanket, his hair brushing his shoulders.

I couldn't say anything. A wave rolled down my belly, all the way between my thighs, and I almost lost my balance. I landed on my knees beside him, breathing in the sudden scent of musty leaves—the scent of Marshall.

"You OK, Gull? You want to talk?"

But I didn't.

I wanted all the words to go away, to stop talking and thinking about everything. I leaned over and pushed his hair away. And then I kissed him. We were a sudden pile of elbows and ankles and knees. He kissed me back, his arms around me, his mouth wanting and wet.

Before long I lay beside him, and we crushed against each other until all our edges vanished. We kept kissing until our tongues met and any hesitancy slipped away so that the waves overcame me. Marshall lifted himself and traced my face with the tips of his fingers. Then his hands were everywhere. My hands were everywhere. Every touch reached a place where everything stopped inside me—like looking up at a sky so crowded with stars, my breath just quit. How many stars were there? How much did I want him?

Stacey Donovan is a novelist, editor, and ghostwriter whose work includes the novel Dive, the forthcoming nonfiction anthology, What We Know About Writing: Notes from Ashawagh Hall, and the novel Who I Am Keeps Happening.

found that the burglar had left a pillowcase, stamped with the name of a men's shelter, wrapped around a steak knife.

"We decided to get an apartment with a doorman," Karin said. "Good idea."

Karin went to NYU at night and received her BA, followed by an MFA from Columbia University's Graduate Writing Program.

During this time, of course, her ideas began to form into the book she would write. Her inspiration came from the Psychologist Carl Jung, the heir to Sigmund Freud, who wrote about sleeping with one of his patients, 19-year-old Sabina Spielrein. In Jung's time, psychology was very new and there were no laws or rules against this. Jung, noting in his diaries that Sabina was a very mixed up young woman, considered this an act of therapy. Maybe it was.

Yapalater's book begins with a group getting together for a weekly therapy meeting. The psychiatrist doesn't show up. The scene shifts to the psychiatrist's office.

"He had tried, initially, to manage the desire within himself and yet allow for the nuances of counter-transference," Yapalater writes. "The books that lined the walls behind him were filled with lengthy discourse on the subject — cautionary words of narrow-minded traditionalists, uncomfortable in the arena of the erotic. So-called pioneers of psychoanalysis.

"He surveyed the stacks of papers piled on his desk. She was his last patient for the day. He could relax. Forget the clock, the self-imposed confinements of time. Friday. The end of a long workweek. Some inner process was at work. Time to abandon old principles...challenge the dated textbook point of view..."

The psychiatrist turns up dead in Central Park, inside a vintage Mercedes, the windows closed, the carbon monoxide seeping in. An apparent suicide. Or is it?

An Hour To Kill by Karin Yapalater is an excellent thriller for a winter afternoon in front of a roaring fire, and it would make an excellent gift for the holiday season.

Kasparov just came in and finished him. It will be interesting to see if the computer shows any caution because of that."

"The computer won't show anything. It just plays."

"Yeah."

I zipped forward.

There were some commercials. Then the computer moved. And Kasparov moved. It was happening quickly with FAST FORWARD. Then there were more moves. Even though everything was zipping along, or perhaps because of it, I quickly oriented myself to what was going on. There were the two names on the upper left side of the screen, COMPUTER and KASPAROV, one above the other. An arrow showed whose turn it was. And a timer was showing the number of minutes and seconds that were passing, as one or the other contemplated a move. It was Kasparov's move. And the numbers were speeding along. I pressed PLAY. Everything slowed to normal.

"This is amazing," the first announcer said. "We've had five moves on each side now and the computer has made each one in just three or four seconds. It knows exactly what it is doing. Kasparov meanwhile is averaging four minutes to make a move. He has to analyze everything. And now he is up to seven minutes. This doesn't look good."

"It's bad. The computer is up to something. You can get some idea just looking at the board. This is wide open chess. Big bold moves. Right out of the gate. And Kasparov is very pinned down. Just look at how his king is out of position. Only two of the pawns remain."

The camera came in on Kasparov's face. He was looking very uncomfortable. Perspiration was on his forehead. I thought I saw a facial twitch.

"Kasparov looks completely stunned," the announcer said.

I fast forwarded and all the timer did was go up and up and up. Kasparov was staring at the board. It went on and on. Six minutes passed, then ten, then fifteen, then eighteen. I whizzed through this in about ten seconds. Suddenly in just a flash, there appeared to be somebody moving. I saw that it was the computer's turn. Ten seconds had gone by. I pressed rewind. Found Kasparov's move.

"As we predicted, Kasparov moved the castle to F8."

"He really had no choice."

"He's in a real spot now. He really didn't start off the game with his customary energy. I think the computer caught him flatfooted with that first move."

"Well, he's in deep trouble now. He's thinking, how am I going to get out of this alive? In fact, WHY am I still alive? Why hasn't he finished me off?"

I briefly fingered the rewind button with the idea of going back to the very opening move of the match. Then I decided against it. I wouldn't know one thing from another, anyway. So instead, I fast forwarded. Now it was the computer's turn to be taking a long time thinking of its next move. The timer was speeding up to eight, ten and twelve minutes on the computer's side. I slowed down to regular play.

"...really, really good for Kasparov. It means the computer is out of his game. He can't figure it out."

"Or, he's TRYING to figure it out."

"In any case, what a move!"

"We shall see."

Now I fast forwarded for a very long time. And suddenly Kasparov was standing up and shaking hands and people were coming over to him. I rewound to where that just started to happen and went to PLAY.

"...have accepted the draw."

"You know, this is the only time when the programmers take over for the computer. They meet and go over everything, and they make the decision. The computer would just keep right on playing. What does it know?"

"Nobody was going anywhere with this anyway."

"We'll be right back with a recap and an interview with Kasparov about this game."

FAST FORWARD. Commercial, commercial, commercial. Kasparov and the announcers, sitting around a table. PLAY.

"...so I just had to withstand the onslaught. Get him into a middle game."

Kasparov was relaxed and smiling.

"At any point, did you think he had you?"

"No. But then, I've learned you never know with a computer. It can make brilliant moves. And then a terrible blunder as it did in game three. It's very different from playing a human being. And as time goes by the computers are getting better, but the human is getting better too. I just had to get it through to the middle game."

"So this has been a successful draw."

"Yes. But we'll try again. I just have to avoid losing my concentration and making mistakes as I did in game two. I have to be very prepared."

"Thank you Mr. Kasparov. And now, after this break, we'll have a final recap..."

CLICK.

I looked at my watch. It was 8:22 am. Still nobody was up. I had watched four hours and ten minutes of chess in twenty two minutes. Zip chess.

I walked into the kitchen and turned on the coffee maker.

I think I'm onto something.

Second Annual Thanksgiving Benefit Barrel Tasting At Peconic Bay Winery: Sunday, November 23, 2-6 p.m.

Join PBW winemaker Greg Gove on the Great Lawn just east of the winery as he draws and serves samples of the winery's 2002 Merlot, 2002 Cabernet Sauvignon, and 2002 Cabernet Franc straight from the barrel. The winery will also serve its entire line of award-winning bottled selections, each paired with dishes from a distinguished panel of executive chefs. Peconic Bay's 2001 Merlot, featured at last year's barrel tasting, will also be available for purchase at the event. And the winery will, for the first time this year, conduct sales on futures of the 2002 reds offered at the tasting.

The event will consist of a tasting of foods prepared by top Long Island and Manhattan chefs paired with Peconic Bay wines. Return To Glory

The Plan And The Man Behind Downtown Riverhead's Revitalization

By Roy Bradbrook

The fact that Riverhead now boasts a wonderfully restored gem of a theater, the Vail-Leavitt Music Hall, is largely due to the persistence of one man, Vince Tria, and a devoted team of volunteers. And though the thrilling reopening of the Music Hall was dampened somewhat by Vince's absence due to illness, it is great to report that he is now feeling much better and is still as enthusiastic about life and improving the town as ever.

Recently, Vince mentioned to a friend that, with the Vail-Leavitt project virtually finished, he would love to head up a "Citizens Action Group" with the objective of revitalizing the rest of downtown Riverhead. He feels that in this way progress could be expedited rather than leaving everything to the Riverhead Town Board.

Now, one of the unfortunate characteristics of so many medium and small towns across our country is the way that economic downturns cause the downtown areas to become dilapidated along with the rise of out-of-town shopping malls and cinemas. Some towns have fought back, and a great local example is the way that Greenport has been transformed into a destination town for people seeking good restaurants, specialized shops, bed and breakfast accommodations, or just somewhere to spend a few pleasant hours or days.

There is an old adage about being careful what you wish for because you may get it. Well, Vince's wish somehow reached the ears of Riverhead's new Supervisor elect, Phil Cardinale, and without further ado, Vince heard himself publicly proclaimed by Phil as new Tsar of Riverhead's Downtown Revitalization project! Incidentally, because Vince wants to continue his work reporting on Town Board meetings for his radio station WRIV1390, he is not even going to accept a nominal salary to avoid any appearance of conflict of interests. Vince was very passionate as he talked of his belief that public reporting and public debate of local affairs is so important for the community.

These are still early days and Vince intends to formulate in more detail his visions for the Business Improvement Area of Main Street and the Riverfront. While I was talking with him he received an invitation to attend an upcoming meeting of the new Supervisor's transition team, which delighted him. He was very forthright about how he sees his position if the planned objectives are to be met.

"When we worked on the Vail-Leavitt project, I convinced my colleagues that I should have a high degree of autonomy in decision making, while still reporting back to the other members of the board. That worked and for me to get this exciting new and much bigger project to work, I will need to have the authority to make decisions. I know that will not be as easy to achieve because this is now the public sector, but somehow we have to find a way to do it because there will be no benefit from a situation where your wheels are always spinning and forward progress is minimal."

Vince already has many ideas, chief among them to bring in a selection of enterprises.

"We used to have four supermarkets, two shoe stores, a clothing store and two jewelers, and now they are virtually all gone." He talked of many possibilities, such as a large farmer's market, a flea market with vendors carefully checked out to ensure that they conform to the overall standards that Vince wants to maintain, and small store owners paying affordable rents offering a wide range of products and services. All in all, ways to get people back into visiting Riverhead to enjoy themselves.

Another area where Vince is determined to see progress is with the reopening of the Suffolk Theater, which is a key attraction on Main Street.

"I am very hopeful that this will happen within the next two years. The proposed purchasers want to acquire land at the back of the building to enable them to expand the stage area and install an orchestra pit." Vince also is a firm believer that downtown should have a new multiplex cinema. He said that the previous day he had received a call informing him that a group of investors was very interested in this proposition, and he was arranging a meeting to explore the options.

"This is how most of these things start,' he said with another flash of his unbounded exuberance. "When we do move ahead on the revitalization project in total, there undoubtedly will be times when the town board will have to be prepared to exercise the principle of 'eminent domain' to ensure that projects vital for the community are not held up."

When questioned about the make up of the new town board and how this could affect the supervisor elect's plans, Vince was still optimistic.

"I have talked with quite a few people and the good news is that when it comes to revitalizing downtown Riverhead, there seems to be a lot of unanimity. I believe they will all work together, despite differing

with Susan Whitney Simm

When Max Moran's show opened at Martha Clara Vineyards in September of 2002, the weather outside echoed the artist's incredible Manhattan rainscapes inside. Life imitating art?

I had the pleasure of both reviewing that show and meeting Max the following morning, and have been impressed with his work ever since.

"Max's style," I wrote at the time, "which he describes as 'American regional,' is at times impressionistic in its softness, as in his series of pale city rainscapes, while at other times pulsing with vibrant color, as in 'Central Park Dusk.' The best of Max's work is provocative and emotional, effectively capturing the essence of the moment. This is especially true of the rainscapes. Max is also a master at using light to create depth and recreate atmosphere, something he does beautifully in 'East 93rd Street' as well as in 'Central Park Dusk.'"

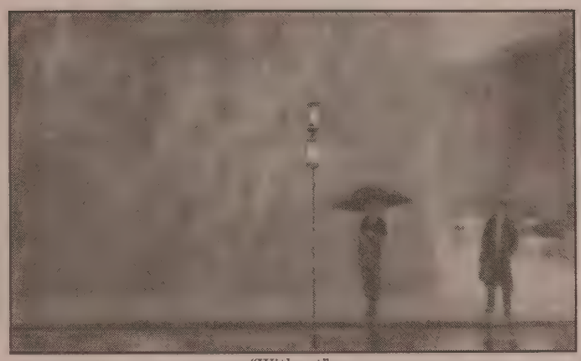
Perhaps that opening, and the nearly sold-out show that followed it, was portentous. The rainscapes have since become so popular that Max decided to make limited edition, signed prints on archival, acid-free paper. Other images of the artist's work, including images of the North Fork, Manhattan and upstate New York, are also available in the same format.

"There are images that linger in the mind, long after the encounter," said Max. "We draw upon them for many reasons and for extended periods of time. The images portrayed in these new prints are familiar yet timeless and will offer my patrons a chance to experience a more intimate look at both Manhattan and the North Fork."

Max focused primarily on New York City during the early to mid-90s. Scenes from Madison Avenue, including one of Restaurant Pascalou, and another of The Corner Bookstore, beautifully depict glowing interior light. Later, at the turn of the century, the artist fixed his sights more and more on the North Fork. There is now a print available of Max's rendition of the classic Jamesport Post Office (perhaps the most painted and photographed PO in the country!) as well as the picturesque Mattituck train station. The artist is also in the process of creating more prints of other North Fork scenes.

Though the rainscapes seem to have really captured peoples' imagination at the moment – the images have a dream-like quality, almost as if they are painted from memory, and when hung in a series, they make a very dramatic presentation – all of Max's new prints are of excellent quality and make great gifts, either matted and framed or as they are.



"Without"

"Schroon River Bridge, Adirondack Mountains" 2003

"Pascalou, Madison Avenue"

Max has spent over a decade "documenting" the agrarian culture of the North Fork, and his style has evolved subtly over the years. The images don't hit one over the head, revealing every detail. More often it's what Max dares to leave out of a painting that draws us in. His work, though it truly reflects his love of his subject, does so without being sentimental, a pitfall many artists can't seem to avoid in the face of natural beauty.

Paintings and prints are available directly through the artist – visit www.maxmoran.com – and prints are available at Cecily's Love Lane Gallery in Mattituck (298-8610) and Fiedler Gallery on Main Street in Greenport (477-4242).

political affiliations. As one person involved in town government told me, 'We all pay taxes and we all want the best for Riverhead.' I know it's very easy to talk the talk but now it really is time for all of us to walk the walk. I foresee this as an 8- to 10-year project and one important element for me will be to ensure that there is built-in continuity ready for the time when I step down from this roundabout"

Riverhead, despite some fallen glory over recent years, still remains the County Seat of Suffolk County. The building of Atlantis Marine World has brought more and more visitors. The opening of such restaurants as Tweeds pulls diners in from all parts of Long Island. The newly restored Vail-Leavitt Music Hall is set to offer a wide range of professional and amateur cultural events throughout the year.

But there obviously is still a lot to be accomplished, and Vince Tria is under no illusions about the task he will face as de facto "Tsar." He will never have the absolute power of Peter the Great, but make no mistake, Vince was not kidding when he said, "I have a bad habit. When I get involved in something, it's a 100 percent plus commitment. Greenport owes its revitalization to the love one man has for his town. I love Riverhead the way he loves Greenport."

As we parted, Vince invited me to come back and talk to him in January. It will be great to report then that the walk is being walked and that progress is being made to make Riverhead again the town it deserves to be.

Michael Jackson

Well, you can pretty much figure out from the title of this column that it is going to be fairly interesting. I mean, how can it not be interesting? We are talking about Michael Jackson here. I just can't get over him.

Personally, I have mixed feelings about Michael Jackson. On the one hand, you have a guy who is one of the biggest music sensations the world has ever seen. During his prime, he could make people cry, pass out, scream their heads off; just about any form of pleasurable emotion was experienced on the highest of levels at a Michael Jackson concert.

Sometimes when I think about Michael Jackson, I get jealous. I mean, it would be amazing to have the kind of fame and money that this guy has. There is not a person in the world that does not respect him for his music. There is not a person in the world that doesn't know his name and at least one of his songs. But then, you get to thinking about how he treats himself both physically and mentally, and the jealousy fades. I mean, this guy has got some problems.

Michael Jackson's Mug Shot, 2003

Seeing Michael Jackson's transition from normal-looking guy to really strange-looking guy was an experience in itself. In a way, it was kind of like watching somebody add new and improved things onto their car. At first you are like, wow, those are some really nice rims that you got there and I really like your new GPS system that you got, too. But then, next thing you know the car has giant neon lights coming out from the bottom, flames coming out the back, and giant dice hanging from the rear-view mirror. Suddenly, all the work that the person put into their car seems almost like a waste of time. Just get a new car buddy, this is all overkill.

Everything about Michael Jackson is fake. He has a fake nose, his skin color is fake, even the cleft in his chin is fake. He is completely obsessed with his looks and his age. He wears a mask to protect his face from pollutants that will make him age quicker, he sleeps in an oxygen chamber to make himself appear younger, and one of the most shocking facts that I read about Michael Jackson is his weight. He is 5'11 inches tall but just 120 lbs. That is just absolutely and utterly ridiculous.

I've got nothing against Michael Jackson for treating his body this way. In fact, if I were in his shoes, I probably would have done something similar, maybe not to such extremes, but I'm sure that I would have had some sort of plastic surgery. I mean, the guy is the media's bulls-eye. Everywhere he goes somebody is talking about him, criticizing him. All it takes for me to get a haircut is for one of my friends to tell me to get one. If I read in People magazine that they thought I was fat, I can tell you right now I wouldn't eat for a week.

But with what he is doing, it is just so sad to me to see a human being put himself through such extreme physical trauma in order to please the public. The guy does everything he can to be cool and to make people happy, and we just laugh. It's a sad thing to see somebody get so messed up from the world.

But here is the thing with Michael Jackson that is just no good. He likes to sleep in his bed with young kids. He's actually said so. And if the allegations against him regarding the sexual molestation of children is true, then he should go to jail for a long time. However, I just have one question. Why are parents letting their kids go to his place? If I was a twelve-year-old kid and got dropped off at Michael Jackson's house by my parents, I think that I would have the sense to say, "Why the hell are you dropping me off at Michael Jackson's house?" The guy has already made a multi-million dollar settlement with a kid whose parents objected to what they believed went on there. You definitely know that if you are 12 and from the U.S.

Here is what I think. I think that nobody is acknowledging the obvious, given the uncertainty of the situation. If you are a parent and dropping off your kid at Michael Jackson's house it could mean two things. First, it means you are being reckless with your kid. Second, it could well mean you are risking that your kid will get molested in the hopes that you can settle out of court and make a million screwed-up-kid bucks. It's so messed up its ridiculous. A parent that is stupid enough (or smart enough) to bring a kid to Michael Jackson's house for a sleepover should lose custody of the child. That's what I think.

When In Manhattan...

Poetry at the Apollo

Check your assumptions at the door. Russell Simmons' Def Poetry Jam is neither rap, nor theater, nor bad poetry about flowers and clouds. What you will see and hear at The Apollo Theater on Thursday, December 4 at 8 p.m., and Friday the 5 (Simmons will make a special host appearance at Friday's show) at 7 p.m., is an art formed from all of the above. Now add to this mix, the intelligence and raw emotion that can only come from people who have seen and felt what life is like beyond our sheltered hamlets by the sea. Which, by the way, is where Simmons, the creator, chooses to live these days.

Hip-Hop artist, Mos Def

If you have HBO, you may have seen the show hosted by hip hopper, Mos Def, or, if you're a fan of Broadway, you may have seen the Def poets live. The winner of the 2003 Tony Award for Best Special Theatrical Event, Russell Simmons' Def Poetry Jam on Broadway features many of the performers in this national tour. It has been called "groundbreaking," and caused a sensation in the theater scene, upstaging non-traditional acts from Bring in da Noise, Bring in da Funk, to the dance-only Contact.

Def Poetry comes from a rich history of poetic performance beginning with Jazz and the Beats, and connecting more directly with the Poetry Slam scene, rooted in movements like The Nuyoricans of Manhattan's Lower East Side. The Nuyorican Poetry Café on Avenue C and Third Street was founded by poet and professor Miguel Algarin in 1975, and moved to its current location in 1980. Another founding member, playwright and poet, Miguel Pinero, had just won two awards for Best Play of the 1974 season with his gritty prison drama, Short Eyes. In one episode of HBO's Russell Simmons Presents Def Poetry, Benjamin Bratt, who played the late poet in the 2001 film, Pinero, read Lower East Side. The moving work details Pinero's wish for his ashes to be scattered "beneath the tenement sky" where "fancy cars and pimps' bars and juke saloons and greasy spoons make my spirit fly," on "the Lower East Side." This 'heart of the streets' conviction, combined with emotionally true delivery and a tough judging system using randomly selected spectators, is what makes Slam poetry and, minus the judging, defines DPJ. The Nuyorican is responsible for at least one of this weekend's performers.

Mayda Del Valle is a South Side Chicago native who moved to New York City after graduating from Williams College in 2000. She's a winner of the Nuyorican's Grand Slam, and became the youngest poet and first Latina to win the individual title at The National Poetry Slam. She will be doing her thing in a lineup of at least seven other poets. The players include Beau Sia (a member of Nuyorican's National Poetry Slam Team), Black Ice, Suheir Hammad, Bassey Ikpi, Lemon, and finally, Poetri, the plus-sized poet with a plus-sized heart. He examines love in all forms, and weighs in with comedic might when he muses over such things as "Krispy Kreme Kroissants" – the three K'd beast made to keep the black man "down and round."

The Apollo Theater has a tradition of Slam itself. Since 1934 it has been hosting its legendary "Amateur Night" that is infamous for having the toughest audience out there, and famous for launching the careers of Ella Fitzgerald, James Brown, Michael Jackson, and Lauryn Hill, to name a few. The historic Harlem landmark can be seen each week on the syndicated television show, Showtime at the Apollo, and draws 1.3 million visitors annually. This couldn't be a better match. Russell Simmons Def Poetry Jam is truly worthy of the ride uptown, and draws an excellent mix of people.

The Apollo Theater is located at 253 W. 125th St. between 7th and 8th Avenues. For tickets call 212-307-7171, or call Ticketmaster. Prices are $27-$47. The Nuyorican Poets Café hosts a Slam every Friday at 10p.m. for the low admission of $7. They can be reached at www.nuyorican.org

Celebrate A Hero

Local Author Seeks Fellow Philanthropists For A Great Cause

Hey Babe,

I'm still on cloud nine from that book. I still can't begin to put into words how great that was of you and all the nice things you said. If I am ever down, I'll pick that book up and it will make me smile. I should know it by heart now, I read it about 6 times already. You are the best. I love you so much and can't wait to see you again.

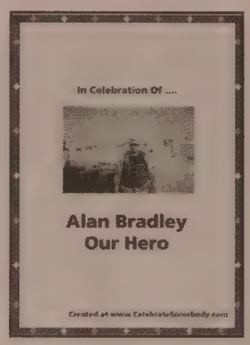
Alan
I love you.

War is often hardest on families, and communication with loved ones left behind can mean the world to someone serving thousands of miles away in a strange and dangerous place. The heartfelt letter above was sent from American soldier Alan Bradley, currently stationed in Iraq, to his wife Sharon. The book he refers to was created by his family and friends using a website called CelebrateSomebody.com. It is the brainchild of Joan Breiner and Susyn Reeves of East Hampton.

"Alan's tour of duty was extended by six months and he and his wife Sharon were despondent," said Joan. "She wanted to let him know that he was deeply loved and appreciated by all his friends and family."

So Sharon came up with the idea of using CelebrateSomebody.com, a website which allows individuals to invite family and friends to take part in creating a personal book commemorating a special occasion, such as a birthday or anniversary. She decided to make a book to send to Alan in Iraq. Joan and Susyn were so moved and inspired by Sharon's book that they decided to create CelebrateaHero.com, a link on their site designed especially for families with members serving in active duty overseas. And they are offering this service FREE to these families.

"We thought that this would be an important gift for every solider in harms way," said Susyn, "a gift of love, to let servicemen and women know that they are appreciated and remembered."



The inspiration behind CelebrateSomebody.com came when Susyn wanted to acknowledge, in a unique way, a significant birthday for Joan. The two women have been friends for twenty-five years. When Joan's fiftieth birthday was approaching, Susyn decided to create for her a personal book, In Celebration Of Your 50th Birthday, filled with loving messages from family and friends. (No stranger to the power of words, Susyn is the author of Choose Peace & Happiness: A 52-Week Guide; Joan is an entrepreneur specializing in innovative software ideas.)

"Here is a gift that will show you who you are through the eyes of people who love you," said Susyn. Joan was so deeply moved by this powerful expression of love that she thought, "everyone in the world should have one of these books." And so CelebrateSomebody.com began.

To create a book for a hero you would like to celebrate, go to www.CelebrateaHero.com and click on the link CelebrateSomebody.com. You will then be asked to choose a title page, book design, album cover and the topics under which guests may contribute. Topics such as "The reason I admire you is" and "You are my hero because" make it easy for guests to communicate their feelings. The designated organizer then creates an email list of family, friends and co-workers who will receive an electronic invitation asking them to participate. The invitation has a link that goes directly to the book site. For those who may not have an email address, personal calls giving the website and books ID can also be arranged.

Though books are being offered free of charge to families with loved ones serving overseas, the actual cost of producing each book is $70. Therefore, Susyn and Joan are seeking both corporate and private sponsors, each willing to fund production of 20 books or more.

"This program is not about personal politics regarding the war," said Joan. "This is about letting soldiers know they are loved and not forgotten as they risk their lives defending our freedom. Currently we have a backlog of families requesting books, and often military families are strapped for money."

If you are able to help by becoming a sponsor of this wonderful project, especially as the holidays approach, please contact Joan Breiner at 941-955-5359 or email Joan@CelebrateSomebody.com. It could be the greatest gift you give this season.

A Cozy Getaway

With the icicles of winter looming right around the corner, the idea of snuggling up in front of a warm fire with a mug of piping hot chocolate is becoming more and more appealing. And after last year's rough winter, I think all Northeasterners are dreaming of a relaxing vacation this time around. Everyone deserves to quit shoveling and put their feet up and relax once in a while, right? Sure! But there's the issue of time off from work and travel expenses. Unless…

Unless you decide to escape to a cozy bed and breakfast right on the East End for a weekend of R & R. Whether you decide to hop over to the North Fork, venture into the lands of the South Fork, or revel in the serenity of Shelter Island, the area has much to offer and a number of different B & B's to take your mind off the fast-paced lifestyle New Yorkers are notorious for.

If you've been looking for an excuse to explore the wine country area of the North Fork, then settling in Greenport, a charming former whaling port, for a couple of days is the way to go. The Barlett House Inn, on Front Street, is a Victorian home with Corinthian columns and windows reaching from the floor to the ceiling. Formerly the home of New York Assemblyman John Barlett, who built the house in 1908, the Inn has history emanating from its every wall. Each of the ten bedrooms has a private bath and is decorated with period furniture. Visitors are invited to enjoy the two fireplaces and the beautiful porch out front, if the weather permits. Guests are also invited to breakfast, which can be eaten in the dining area, on the porch, or under the authentic chandelier in the living room. A stay based on double occupancy and a queen size bed at the Barlett House Inn runs from $110 to $215/ a night, from November to May. Call (631) 477-0371 or visit www.greenport.com/bartlett/welcome.htm for more information.

The Sterling House Bed & Breakfast, also located in Greenport, has more of a warm, Southern feel to it. Upon arrival in the afternoon, you will be greeted with tea and lemonade, after which you are free to do as you wish. Some people visit the quaint village and vineyards, while others come to simply find a cove in which to read a book. Although the Sterling House is smaller than the Barlett and some of the rooms have semi-private baths, it does have a Victorian parlor where people have been known to take a load off and lose track of time. A deluxe continental breakfast is served in the breakfast room for all to enjoy. The Inn has a winter special, where a room with a private bath and a queen-size bed is $125 per night. If you stay two nights or more, you receive a $25 gift certificate towards a future stay. If you opt for a week's stay, the price is equivalent to a five-night stay. Contact The Sterling House at (631) 477-0654 or at www.sterlinghousebandb.com.

On the other hand, if you are aiming for the South Fork, East Hampton's Pink House Inn may be a place you want to check out. Located on the Village Green, this elegant home offers a choice of five flowery rooms, each uniquely decorated and with a private bath. A quick walk from town, the village is easily accessible if you feel like going out, but if frolicking indoors is what you are in the mood for, you can also grab a book from the inn's library and curl up in front of the fire in the drawing room. A continental breakfast is included in the $250-$375 for a room with a queen bed, based on double occupancy. And you can find out more details at www.pinkhouseinn.com or by calling (631) 324-1122.

Other great elegant bed and breakfast options in East Hampton include the Maidstone Arms Inn and the Mill House Inn. Both are located in town, a short walk away from whatever it is you feel like doing with your time off. The Maidstone Inn is notorious for its Water Room, a relaxed central room that is dedicated to the essence of coastal life on the East End and decorated with artwork by a local artist, Jarvis Wilcox. It is also home to The Maidstone Arms Restaurant and The Boat Bar and Bistro, two marvelous restaurants with great meals often savored by celebrities in the area. Your stay includes a breakfast with fresh-baked muffins, bread and Chef del Favero's famous specialty scones. A night's stay in a room with a queen bed at The Maidstone Arms Inn, with its precious antiques scattered throughout, is $250 and up. For reservations, call (631) 324-5006 or

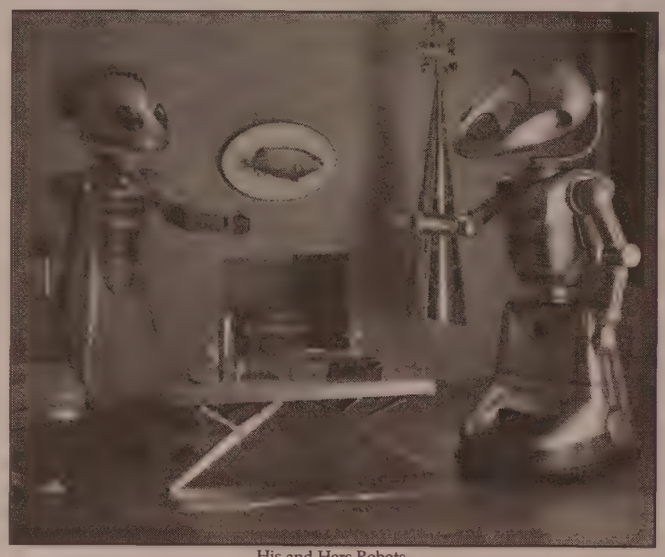
Toys For Tots – Really Big Ones

It is time to once again share in one of the joys of the holiday season: watching wooden newscasters review the newest toys on the nightly news with smarmy PR people who are in the studio to hawk their clients' products. When it comes to gifts, kids are easy. Well, the small ones at least. Bright and loud always seems to please – especially loud, the noisier the better. That's why Santa always brings Mommy and Daddy big bottles of aspirin for Christmas morning. The big kids, the over-thirty set, however, are a different story. Everyone has a few nuts (you know, husband, wife, brother, uncle) on their gift list and it's best to start looking early for hard to find gifts. If you have the means, one easy out is the rare walnut-sized diamond Sotheby's recently attempted to auction off. No buyers wanted to pony up the eight point five million dollar asking price though. The flawless gem was expected to go for as much as 13 million dollars, but bidding didn't go over seven million. Sotheby's is now trying to sell the stone privately. At the very least you'll win husband of the year honors if you tuck it into your wife's stocking. OK, but now you're saying, "I don't have a spare nine million dollars lying around, and my crazy relatives would probably just play golf with a diamond that big anyway, so what do I buy for these nutters?" Or something like that.

For the Dog Lover: People are always talking to their dogs. These people who talk to their dogs actually expect their mangy mutts to answer back, too. While we were all laughing at these canine crackpots, Dr. Norio Kogure, a PhD of veterinary medicine at Tokyo's Kogue Animal Hospital spent long hours researching on the hunch that they were right. Frighteningly, he's come up with a device that bears them out – s ort of. The Bow-Lingual Dog Translator claims to, and these are their words not mine, "turn woofs into words." What the device actually does is, see, you put a sensor on the dog's collar which relays the dog's "emotions" back to a LCD display screen on the handheld receiver that shows a happy, sad, angry, frustrated or assertive face that looks something like a Sanrio character.



His and Hers Robots

For the Howard Hughes: Here's that gift that says, "Hey, we all know you're a freak, but we're comfortable with that." Nothing says lovin like a reinforcement of neurosis. The wearable Ionic Breeze Personal Air Purifier is the perfect gift for the loon on your list. The device supposedly purifies the air that the wearer breathes. The description has lots of little ™ signs everywhere and includes obviously made-up but seemingly complicated words like "Zenion" and "Porex," so you know it's scientific (or at least pseudo-scientific). The ideal solution for that Uncle who walks around wearing a surgical mask crying out, "Can't breathe. Dirty, dirty air. You're all filthy. Stay away. Dirty. Dirty."

For the Has Everything: His and Her Remote-Controlled Robots from Neiman Marcus. A steal at $400,000 for the set. Each robot stands nearly six-feet tall and comes equipped to help around the house. Send a robot to answer the door, its onboard video camera will show you who is at the door and deliver the guest to you on its ride-on platform. The only other thing your spoiled gift recipient could possibly need is a boy, Elroy. His robot is even programmed to be empathetic with us humans. When you care enough to admit you are incapable of conveying real human emotion, his robot will do it for you. Now isn't that what modern Christmas is all about?

Nifty Nibbles For Holiday Grazing!

The holiday season presents the opportunity for a walk down memory lane. We remember the traditions, songs and especially, food and seasonal aromas. Dancing in our heads are memories of bellies, achingly full with roasted turkey and all the sides. But let's not jump ahead of ourselves because this story has a savory beginning. It opens with the linchpin of party starters – appetizers.

In serving appetizers, the general formula is five to seven hors d'oeuvres per person for the first two hours of a party. Mixing homemade with store-brought can help to round out offerings. Store-bought platters take some of the pressure off by minimizing preparations. Assorted cold cuts, exotic cheeses or even a pork tenderloin are worthy contenders. The trick is to dress them up – garland, cranberries, gourds, pinecones and pomegranates are great places to start. By doing so, you'll increase their appeal.

If the idea of store-bought is paramount to culinary high treason (ketchup on steak, head-cheese or chitterlings your mom didn't make), here are a few quick starters that can be whipped up in minutes.

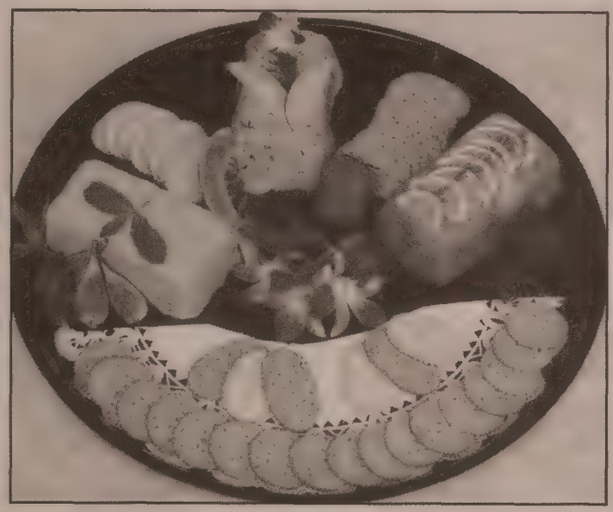
•Cheese bread. Who can say no to cheese bread? Butter slices of peasant bread and sprinkle with Asiago cheese and oregano; toast.

•Smoked-fish pate. No really, it's good. Puree smoked trout with cream cheese, squeeze of lime and chives. Pulse in chopped smoked salmon and serve.

•Soppressata Chips. Thinly slice soppressata. Spread on baking sheet and bake in 350-degree oven until crisp.

•Near pear-fect. Toss thin slices of pear in a little lemon juice to keep them from browning, then top with a small scoop of Stilton pressed into a walnut half.

•Figs in a blanket. Wrap quartered fresh figs with Parma ham and secure with a cocktail stick. Sprinkle with olive oil and balsamic vinegar, then grill or roast for 3-5 minutes. Turn once halfway through cooking. To serve, season with fresh pepper and dribble with olive oil.



Tempt your guests to experiment, courtesy a cheese platter. Don't be shy, be daring in your selections. Pair standards such as cheddar, Swiss and blue with a Fontina (mild Danish cheese), an Etorki (mild sheep's milk from the Pyrenees) and a goat's cheese, like Couturier. Experts suggest four cheeses for a party of 10 and about seven for 25 to 50. Most fruits work well with cheese except for citrus and tropical varieties (their high acid content clashes).

The easiest of appetizers, and some say the most satisfying, are dips, which may be served warm, as in the case of spinach artichoke, or cold, like avocado salsa. As the name implies, avocado salsa is very easy to make. Scoop out the flesh from an avocado. Cut it into 1/4-inch cubes and add to a prepared salsa. Sprinkle with finely chopped cilantro, and it's a home run.

To make spinach artichoke dip you will need:

1 cup chopped artichoke hearts
1/2 cup spinach
8 oz. cream cheese
1/2 cup grated parmesan cheese
1/2 teaspoon crushed red pepper flakes
1/4 teaspoon salt
1/8 teaspoon garlic powder dash black pepper

Boil spinach and artichoke hearts in 1 cup water for 10 minutes or until tender. Drain in colander. Heat cream cheese in microwave until creamy, add spinach and artichokes (mash veggies) and stir well. Add remaining ingredient and combine.

The "ab-fab-ness" of appetizers is they promote mingling, giggles and conversation. And, they can be prepared ahead so you may relax and enjoy the festivities. A mix of exotic ingredients and inventive combinations encourages guests to try a little bit of this and that. If the gathering has been made up of small bites, for a spectacular finish offer a grand finale. One awe-inspiring dessert – a luscious layer cake, a pie or an ice cream concoction – is sure to be a big hit. Just like your party!

That's The Spirit!

Whether it's cyclical or just a sign of the times, what's old is new again. This means a return to madcap elegance in entertaining. Like two parts "Nick and Nora", one part "Great Gasby" accented with a splash of "Sex and the City" style. Don't fret. It's an opportunity to expand your mixing repertoire with libations that satisfy imbibers and teetotalers, to boot.

Our first selection is no stranger to winter celebrations. If you guessed eggnog, you're right. The traditional recipe calls for raw eggs (salmonella, schmalmonella), but to be on the safe side, our version serves up the necessary nostalgia sans any possible unpleasantness.

Eggnog Royale:
One-half gallon vanilla ice cream
4 cups hot strong coffee
3 cups rye whisky or bourbon
1 cup light rum
Freshly grated nutmeg

Place ice cream in a large heatproof bowl. Add hot coffee. Stir until melted. Stir whisky and rum into the mixture. Serve sprinkled with nutmeg or cover and refrigerate up to 2 days before serving. Makes 16 servings. Tip: the trick to keeping eggnog cool is to add dollops of ice cream. Try vanilla or eggnog-flavored. For a south-of-the-border flavor treat add coconut juice or flavor with coconut milk to taste.

Believe it or not, eggnog has its share of detractors. If it's not your cup of tea, perhaps this warmed-up version of a summer sensation will fit the bill. We call it "Winter Sangria - A Sophisticate's Mulled Wine". Highly aromatic, if not a bit potent, Winter Sangria is a delight. It's served in a punch bowl brimming with citrus and other fruits.

Winter Sangria:
1 cup sugar
1 cup water
10 whole cloves
2 cinnamon sticks
2 liters dry red wine
2 cups applejack or other apple brandy
2 cups orange liqueur, such as Grand Marnier
2 tablespoons aromatic bitters, such as angostura
3 seedless oranges, halved and cut into thin slices
1 lime, cut into thin slices
2 apples and/or pears, cored, seeded, and cut into 1-inch cubes
1 cup strong, fresh-brewed tea
1 quart club soda

In a small saucepan, combine the sugar and water. Over moderately low heat, cook, stirring until the sugar is dissolved (about 5 minutes). Remove from heat, add the cloves and cinnamon sticks, and let cool. Next, in a large punch bowl, combine the bourbon, applejack, orange liqueur, aromatic bitters, the orange and lime slices, the apple cubes, and the tea. Add the syrup and let stand, covered, at least 30 minutes. Just before serving, uncover the punch, add ice, and pour in the club soda. To make it ahead, combine all the ingredients except the apples and soda and keep the mixture in the refrigerator for several days. Before serving, add the apples and club soda and let sit for half an hour.

Arguably, the perfect winter liqueur is Chartreuse and – for those who have the palate – this drink needs no playing with. Green though it may be, not everyone can choke it down. So, if the desire to brandish holiday spirit in the colors of the season is strong, might we suggest the Poinsettia? Served in a champagne flute, this liquid merriment calls for 3 ounces cranberry juice, 4 ounces sparkling wine or champers and a half-ounce of Cointreau for a single serving. One could substitute non-alcoholic bubbly and forego the Cointreau. In either case the result is simply divine and eminently drinkable.

Last but not least, what would the holidays be without a Manhattan? Tracing its roots to the golden age of cocktailing, the Manhattan is a stellar classic and perfect for easing winter's chill. To make a pair...in a cocktail shaker combine four ounces bourbon whiskey and one ounce sweet vermouth and a splash of bitters (angostura) over ice. Shake gently and pour into two martini glasses garnished with stemmed cherries. For a special touch add a hint of cherry juice.

'Tis the season to make jolly, albeit responsibly. Salut!

Shop 'til You Drop... With Maria Tennariello

Thanksgiving Day is the time for family and friends. I will be with my family in Bethpage and I am excited to see Chelsea and Joseph, my grandchildren, and Joe and Janie, my son and daughter-in-law. I love spending this holiday with them, they do all the cooking and I talk about all my shopping!

Now is the time to start getting your copies of Mickey and Betty Paraskevas' books ready for the Christmas holidays. You can get all of them and more at the Paraskevas Gallery (Home of the Jr. Kroll merchandise), 83-E Main Street in Westhampton Beach. I've got mine all ready for my grandchildren...Call 288-3812 for information.

Well, finally my wish came true! I always wanted to see a Chock Full o' Nuts here and viola; they are located at 20 County Road 39 in Southampton. They are serving affordable breakfast, lunch, including burgers and hot dogs, grilled paninis, salads, wraps and overstuffed sandwiches. If you are a Carnegie Deli lover, Chock Full 'o Nuts is serving their famous pastrami and cornbeef sandwiches for only $7.95. Did I mention their smoothies and fresh baked goods? Do check it out!

Gym Source in Southampton is having their "Annual Sale" with 15% to 50% off Cybex, True, Stairmaster, Nautilus, Schwinn, Vision, Hoist and Everlast. Floor models are reduced from 30% to 50% off. Have fun, bet you can't choose just one!

A nice gift to give is a Singer sewing machine and they are priced at $150 at the Vacuum & Sewing Centers on Jobs Lane in Southampton and E. Main Street in Riverhead. And rake up the savings with a $5 off any sewing basket priced over $10.

The Parrish Art Museum on Jobs Lane in Southampton is presenting a fall fundraiser over the Thanksgiving weekend and this is a shopping extravaganza. The legendary flea market features new and gently used merchandise including art books, china, crystal, jewelry, fabrics, silver, estate furniture and the newest rage, vintage clothing and accessories. You can also bid on new designer accessories and leather goods such as Tiffany Atlas watches, a Hermes Birkin bag and a Burberry golf bag, dinners and fine antiques. Parrish will also be showcasing an extensive collection of fine goods in the gift bazaar where there will be a vast display of booths from vendors such as Antique Rug Galleria, Barbara Bellin, Chez Touche, George Dean Callas, Meg Cohen, Everlastings by Diana, Stevenson's Toys and Games, and the beat goes on...One of the highlights is a book signing by photographer Patrick McMullian, his book entitled So80's. Peter Schlessinger who will also sign copies of his recently released publication Checkered Past will join him. Don't miss it. Call 283-2116 ext. 41 for more information.

I found a "Holiday Season" sale of sales at Tabletop Designs by Stephanie Queller on Jobs Lane in Southampton. You can save up to 50% off on all her merchandise and you will be happy to see all the holiday tables set up, crystal, vases, jugs, china, and so much more. Gotta see this to believe it!

On Hampton Road in Southampton, check out the holiday decorations at artistry in flowers. There are table decorations, Mylar balloons, dried or silk arrangements, fresh cut flowers, potpourri and candles. You should order now for the Christmas holiday arrangements. Give a call at 283-8200.

On Main Street at The Village Cheese Shop and also on Love Lane in Mattituck, start ordering your gift

The Mill House Inn, the historic 1790's Inn on Main Street that was recently rated "One of the Top Ten Hamptons Inns" by New York Magazine, offers a number of themed suites, like the Captain's Suite or the Hamptons Classic. While some of the rooms currently have gas fireplaces to enjoy during the cooler months, later this winter they will all have not only fireplaces but also wet bars with refrigerator/freezers and microwaves. Deluxe rooms even have whirlpool baths. Also, good dogs are welcome for $25 per night, as long as they are announced and not left unattended in the Inn. A night's stay in a suite with a queen size bed at The Mill House Inn costs from $150 to $250. And if you're lucky enough to plan your escape during the week, don't forget to ask about the mid-week specials on select rooms from now through December. To make a reservation, you can go to www.millhouseinn.com or call (631) 324-9766.

Another place you may want to consider, especially if you want to stay a bit closer to the city, is the 1880 House Bed and Breakfast, in Westhampton. Located on Seafield Lane, the 1880 House is known as a rural retreat, as well as the home of Elsie Collins. She not only accentuates the romantic authenticity of the inn with beautiful antiques, but brings it to life as she bakes bread and rolls for all to share. The house is filled with Victorian lounges and Shaker benches as well as a piano, a fireplace and a Modern Glenwood Oak pot-belly stove – all adding to the relaxed country atmosphere. With your choice of three warm suites, each with an adjoining sitting room and private bath, you can visit for $125-$150 per night, including breakfast. For more info, look up www.bbonline.com/ny/1880house, or call (631) 288-1559.

And if the natural beauty on the North and South Forks is just not secluded enough for your romantic getaway, then the serene lands of Shelter Island may be more your speed. If you pay a visit to the House on Chase Creek, you will feel like you are at a home away from home, with the stillness of the winter along Chase Creek just beyond the windows. For your comfort and relaxation, there is a fireplace, a sitting room, a sun room and a patio, the last two of which are sure to be beautiful on a sunny winter's day. A night's stay in a queen bed, with breakfast and the panoramic view of the inlet included, will run you from $75 to $95. If you decide that this relaxation, amidst the beautifully natural world on Chase Creek, is an ideal getaway for you, you can call (631) 749-4379 or check out www.chase-creek.com for further details.

So, regardless of whether you end up on the North or South Forks, or somewhere in between, like on Shelter Island, the serenity of the area and the relaxing comfort of the bed and breakfasts on the East End are sure to rejuvenate you. Pick a couple of days and get away this winter – just remember that prices may vary on major holidays. (Oh, and you may want to consider leaving your cell phone and/or children at home to get the most out of the experience.) Enjoy!

baskets, cheese platters and specialty items for the holidays.

At The Retreat Boutique Thrift Shop on Jagger Lane in Southampton there are plenty of new holiday items to choose from. You can also donate or volunteer to help provide shelter and support for victims of domestic violence by calling 329-4398.

While you're driving on the Montauk Highway in Water Mill, stop in at Barn Garage Antique & Home Furnishings for their annual Thanksgiving Weekend Sale. And the best part is, if any of my readers mention my name (in Water Mill), you will get an additional holiday bonus of a 15% discount. Thank you Stan, for passing on that discount to my readers!

Water Mill's Piano Barn on Montauk Highway is having a "Piano Clearance Sale" with great reductions on pianos. You can rent or own one, you know. I prefer owning one!

Marder's is having an "Open House Weekend" from Friday through Sunday, November 28, 29, & 30. They are serving home baked goods including cakes, cookies and rolls along with hot mulled cider. Stop in to see the preview of all the wonderful things in their "Garden Shop" that they have searched all over Europe and the U.S. for. They have assembled a collection of items that you won't find anywhere else, orchids, wreaths, candles, books, tools, and even clothing. No kidding!

There will be a grand opening at Cate Lewis Jewelry at 2454 Main Street in Bridgehampton, on Thanksgiving weekend, Friday through Monday, and everyone is invited...You will get a warm welcome here while you are enjoying a unique selection of precious and semi-precious stone jewelry, elegant shawls and scarves and more. Stop by and tell Kate and her husband Ben that you heard it here in my column.

Scott J. Aveda Lifestyle Salon and Spa in Bridgehampton will be hosting international Aveda makeup artist Rudy Miles and a team of Aveda makeup artists who will be offering $45 makeup applications for $25 with 100% of the proceeds going to the Breast Health Center at Southampton Hospital. Mark your calender, the date is December 12 from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Make your reservation now by calling 537-6696.

I follow The Down Factory at the Elegant John at the Red Horse Market on Montauk Highway in East Hampton very closely. This time of year I don't want to miss one sale. This is a goodie: 25% off the entire inventory of 100% wool blankets. "That's all folks!"

At the Small Potato Nursery, on the Montauk Highway in Bridgehampton (next to the high school), six to eight foot trees start at $24.95. Get going!

How about that "Holiday Sale" at anastasia holland on Main Street in Amagansett? There is a reduction of 25% to 50% off designer gowns and winter wear. Yikes! Let me loose here and I'll need two raises...

Hey, time to run home and take care of Tino and Cosmo...Ooops, I know you know Tino but, did I tell you that I adopted a yellow naped Amazon parrot from my dearest friends Barry Gordin and Patrick Christiano...? To tell you the truth, Cosmo helps me plan out my shopping course from week to week and says "I love you..." Only kidding about the shopping trips.

Until next week. Ciao and have a safe and healthy Thanksgiving.

If you know of, or are having any sales and would like to share them with me, or have any questions regarding the shops or sales, please email me at shoptil@danspapers.com or fax me at: 631-537-3330. I'd love to hear from you.

ART COMMENTARY By Marion Wolberg Weiss

OPPOSITES ATTRACT: MARCEL BALLY, GERSON LEIBER, GABRIELE ROOS, AND BOB MARKELL

Marcel Bally's photography show "Black + White" at the Arlene Bujese Gallery, says it all. Yet, it's not merely the contradictory lighting techniques, high key and low key illumination that makes the exhibit's title so appropriate. There's a more subtle contrast at work, which gives the photographs their interest.

Such an impact imparts a more theoretical comparison: differences between formal meaning and contextual ones. For example, Mr. Bally's penchant for shapes (and more precisely the inner structures of objects) has a formal connotation as he dismantles the whole to reveal its parts. Consider his Dakar boats, St. Petersburg's building construction, and Cutchogue's farm implements. Here, varied configurations lay bare both form and function.

Conversely, other works set the figure / object apart from the setting while simultaneously conveying meaning according to context: the widow standing separate from people (and life) in Albufeira and in Esphahan. The skyscape in Sils-Maria 11 mirrors this, its signification dependent on the surroundings.

"Albufeira"

Gerson Leiber's paintings in the same show feature the opposing concept of parts vs. the whole. For this critic, his works are filled with religious codes, which serve as vehicles of meaning. The primary one is a cross. What's especially intriguing, however, is what we don't see, the artist only revealing a fragment of the entire object, allowing us to imagine the remaining form.

Like Marcel Bally, Gabriele Roos uncovers structure in her sculpture at The Avram Gallery. And like Gerson Leiber, her perspective is a three - dimensional one. There's an internal and external energy evoked, her shapes positioned in this world, as well as in outer space. But there's an opposing, arresting dynamic present, too: ropes and metal bundles / mesh that bind the configurations, constricting their movement and limiting their reach.

Bob Markell's prints at the Blue Door Gallery in Riverhead celebrate contradiction in another way via less formal means. His nude figures are sensual (and have been getting more so), yet the women still maintain their innocence and purity. What gives them interest is what we don't see, like in Mr. Leiber's works. It's obvious that Mr. Markell follows the well-worn adage, "Less is more," conveying it in a new way. Marcel Bally's and Gerson Leiber's works are at East Hampton's Arlene Bujese Gallery until Dec. 7. Ms. Roos' exhibit is at Southampton College's Avram Gallery until Dec. 5. Bob Markell's prints will be at the Blue Door Gallery in Riverhead until Jan. 11, 2004.

HONORING THE ARTIST: BILL DURHAM

"I still haven't figured it out," notes artist and long-time Amagansett resident Bill Durham. "The mystic, the mystery, the way the painting takes on its own life."

Mr. Durham was talking about this week's cover, "The Journey," and why it holds special meaning for him even though it's several years old. But he could just as well have been discussing life in general, or perhaps more to the point, his life.

And what a life it's been, filled with varied experiences and diverse careers. When sharing these instances, Mr. Durham often uses musical metaphors and both practical and philosophical insight.

The musical allusions start immediately during a conversation when he says, "Some things are not good unless they're practiced, like playing a violin; you have to practice."

And again, when Mr. Durham recalls the creative process and the trance – like state it evokes: "When composers create, something special happens, like when artists paint."

It's clear that Mr. Durham loves the arts, not just music. For example, he likes unusual films that most people have never heard about, and several years ago, he went to the movies in New York two or three times a week. And food. The way Mr. Durham describes his skills, we know he considers cooking an art as well. And why not? He learned how to cook from the Gourmet Magazine food critic.

Although Mr. Durham took piano and dance lessons when he was growing up, it was art that he knew he was destined to pursue. "It wasn't easy, however," he remarked in a semi-serious way, "I flunked the third grade because I was always drawing. In the fifth grade I got in trouble for drawing dirty pictures, but they were nudes. My mother was always encouraging me. My father, who was a scientist, was not."

Mr. Durham soon found out that an art career was perfectly acceptable, however, when he went to Michigan State University. "Those were very special days for me," he explains. "One of my

ENTERTAINMENT IN THE HAMPTONS

Special Thanksgiving Holiday Programs

The South Fork's leading cultural venues have wonderful programs this Thanksgiving weekend. Guild Hall has a multi-faceted show Saturday evening, Bay Street Theatre offers a magic show Friday and a play Saturday, and WHBPAC presents the Russian American Kids Circus and then a Doo Wop/Motown show starring Martha Reeves & The Vandellas and the Del Vikings.

Guild Hall's program runs the gamut from rap and hip-hop to classical music, including composer/conductor Victoria Bond's tale of a lost tune, Stephen Dickman's "The Violin Maker" and excerpts from renowned Fiddler on the Roof lyricist Sheldon Harnick's new musical adaptation. Master Rapper Willie Jenkins and Marcus Mims start the show off. Then Victoria Bond's "What's the Point of Counterpoint?" will be played by a violin/piano/percussion group while actor Gerard Doyle tells the story of the lost Tune looking for a friend in the cities of Rhythm, Harmony and Counterpoint.

Composer Stephen Dickman's "The Violin Maker" is also a musical narrative. It will be performed by soprano Carol Meyer, baritone Bruce Rameker, violinist Renee Jolles and pianist Greg Pliska. The finale of the evening is excerpts from Sheldon Harnick's new adaptation of the popular children's tale, The Phantom Tollbooth, with music by Arnold Black. Victoria Bond will conduct this performance, which features East Hampton singer/actor Raphael Odell Shapiro, who attends 8th grade at the Ross School. (Raphael played Wally Webb in Bay Street Theatre's summer 2002 production of Our Town and he returns in December for Stages Children's Theater production of The Wind in the Willows at Guild Hall.)

Willie Jenkins, Victoria Bond, Stephen Dickman and Sheldon Harnick are all East End residents, so this is truly a special evening. Tickets are $20 adults, $10 for Guild Hall members, and free to all children under age 18. Please call the Guild Hall box office at 631-324-4050 to reserve seats for the Saturday, 8 p.m. performance.

Victoria Bond at Guild Hall, Saturday

Sag Harbor's Bay Street Theatre brings in Master Magician Tim Balster for two performances of "Season's Greetings Magic Show" on Friday, November 28, at 1 p.m. and 3 p.m. This TheatreWorks USA presentation includes holiday music, toy soldiers, audience participation and a special surprise visitor. Saturday, an ArtsPower production of Laura Ingalls Wilder: Growing Up on the Prairie will go on at 1 p.m. and 3 p.m. This is the true story of tomboyish Laura and her family as they travel across the Midwest in the late 1800s. (The popular television series Little House on the Prairie is based on Mrs. Wilder's writings.) Tickets for these performances are $12 for adults, $7 for children, and can be purchased online at www.baystreet.org or by calling the theater box office after 11 a.m. at 631-725-9500.

Westhampton Beach Performing Arts Center presents the Russian American Kids Circus on Friday at 3 p.m. and 7 p.m. Founded in 1994, this is a fully-staged professional circus whose stars are children from ages 6 to 16. They are from Russian families in the New York area and are trained by veterans of the famed Moscow Circus. The show includes acrobatics, tightrope-walking, juggling, trapeze work and clowns. Tickets are $40-45 for adults, $15-20 for children, and may be purchased by calling to WHBPAC box office at 631-288-1500 after 1 p.m.

On Saturday at 8 p.m., WHBPAC has a "Doo Wop Meets Motown" concert. The 1950s hit-making group the Del Vikings ("Come Go With Me," "Whispering Bells," etc.), a favorite on the Oldies circuit, start the show off with their uptempo harmony. Then the legendary 1960s Motown singers Martha Reeves & The Vendellas, who still tour 42 weeks a year, will sing their hits "Heatwave," "Dancing in the Streets" and more. Tickets for this show are $45-70 and available at the box office 631-288-1500 after 1 p.m.

There is so much good entertainment here over Thanksgiving weekend that one could begin this 2003 holiday season with tickets to a show.

teachers, who was Jackson Pollock's older brother, Charlie, turned to me one day and said, ' Get the hell out of here. Go to New York.' Ten days later my wife and I were in Manhattan, with no money and no jobs. We settled in Yorkville, and when the grocery store across the street closed, I rented it for a studio."

Mr. Durham likes to remember those days in Yorkville, where he would hang out at Martells, a local place where artists and musicans would gather, like Robert Motherwell and Stan Getz. Fortunately for him, the owner hired Mr. Durham's wife as a secretary and then asked Mr. Durham to work that summer in Amagansett, the home for a new Martells. Soon he was running the restaurant, relying on his past experience as the maitre d' for the Manhattan Ocean Club and his years owning a catering business.

Mr. Durham never returned to New York after that summer of 1967; he's been living in the same house ever since. "I love it here. Maybe because when I first came, I had a chance to meet some of the artists I had read about. Maybe because of all the Hamptons, it's changed the least."

Perhaps it's because Mr. Durham was able to paint here full-time, to realize his dream at last.

Oh, yes. Mr. Durham still cooks gourmet food, plays music to relax and sees odd films with a fellow film buff Marion Wolberg Weiss

Master And Commander: The Far Side Of The World

I don't care! You may have a little, pond-worthy Sun Fish to breezily sail about Sag Harbor's waters or perhaps you were a union card carrying merchant seaman who made runs to Murmansk or you may get seasick reading the tide time tables – makes no difference. Sea Dog or land lubber, you're gonna get a good, hard kick in the keester of fine, solid, good and exciting entertainment when you clamber aboard H.M.S. Pinafore, oops! Sorry wrong review. Make that, H.M.S. Surprise as captained by Russell Crowe as Jack Aubrey, the very loyal officer to the 19th Century's Napoleonic War's staunch Admiral, Lord Nelson. In Master and Commander: The Far Side of the World, Mr. Crowe gives a thicker than Gladiator performance as directed by fellow Australian Peter Weir, who, with John Collee, adapted Master from two of novelist Patrick O'Brian's 20 novels of Aubrey's exploits. Mr. Weir's production utilizes the first book, in which Aubrey bonds with his ship's surgeon, Stephen Maturin, (portrayed in the film by Paul Bettany) and some of the 10th book, when Aubrey's "Surprise" takes on a powerful enemy ship off of South America. All told, it is a remarkably stout, resolute and amazingly engaging film.

Speaking of resolute and stout – Mr. Crowe comes to this demanding role quite a bit beefier. Hey! You can't drive in a spike with a tack hammer. However, don't be misled, this is nowhere near a Governor Arnold kind of grunt and force performance. Crowe wields complex acting and intelligence with authority and it is one of many of the film's virtues that you are given a crash course in shipboard life – its technical and human machinations. You are with Captain Aubrey as he keeps H.M.S. Surprise on an even keel. Sure, the battle scenes are spectacular, but it's the everyday human details of behavioral action among the crew that is most engaging. The business, so to speak, of running a ship! It can be of immeasurable help to those of you who aspire to management of any kind. Which is not to say that you might be a part of a system like the British Navy, whose origins were described by Winston Churchill as being established in the tradition of rum, sodomy and the lash. H.M.S. Surprise's functions do not include sodomy, as produced in this film of rousing Anglo-imperial spectacle, embroiled in defense against Napoleon's France. The rising seas of powerful forces, natural and otherwise, are fought with decent ideals, self-righteous ritual and force of honor. The pomp of English stiff-upper-lip hierarchy fuels Commander Jack Aubrey as he whips up Union Jack fervor in his men. "Do you want a guillotine in Piccadilly? Do you want your children singing the Marseillaise?" he exhorts. "This ship is England!" They are about to do battle with a large French vessel that has them outmanned, out-gunned and, out-distanced – almost as daunting as the huge storm they must weather. It is to my great satisfaction (as it will be to yours) that all this has been created convincingly while capturing the crew's character with intrigue and truth.

As previously observed, Russell Crowe's Aubrey is not all raw–to–rare beef. His ability to dig into the role, to the bone, and extract its subtleties is the real meat of his performance. Within his autonomy is a love for the danger, the details of his job, the brutal nature of it. But he gets drunk, tells off-color jokes and plays the violin. In duet with Dr. Marturin on cello, they play out their relationship of differences – Aubrey's physical action against Maturin's mental ideologies. Their natures also criss-cross. Maturin can fight and Aubrey is also quick witted and thoughtful. The richness of the film, as befits novelist Patrick O'Brian's detailed work, includes the time's scientific research and surgery (such as it was – so be prepared). You will also get into the hearts and minds of the diverse crew members, all performed to the hilt of a sword and the mind. In a garbled time of brainless action movies, the clear, quick movement of such large scale history is a wonder.

Guy-Jean de Fraumeni is the producer/ writer/ director of award-winning European and American feature films. He has been a judge at Major Film and TV award competitions, including the Oscars, the Emmy's and various film festivals. He is assisted by Sarah Halsey.

ENTERTAINMENT IN THE HAMPTONS

Young Playwrights Strut Their Stuff At Bay Street

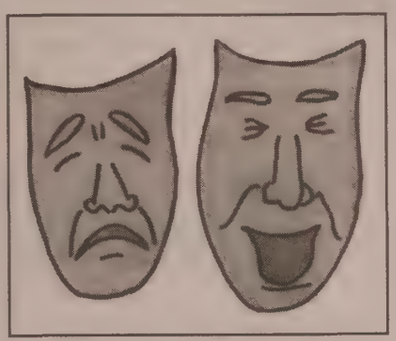
What do teenagers care about? In seven one-act plays written, acted, and staged by high school students at the Bay Street Theatre on November 21 and 22, characters coped with issues ranging from sports, male/female communication, and the problems of fitting in, to suicide, addiction, the afterlife, and terrorism.

These essentially uncensored productions, created under the auspices of the theatre's educational outreach in its 2003 Young Playwrights program, represent an outpouring of raw talent from aspiring young artists trying their wings at writing, acting, directing, and stage production, from props and publicity to costumes and sets, lights, music, and sound. This fall, 200 students participated in a seven-week, 14-workshop dramaturgical curriculum at five local high schools – Bridgehampton, Pierson (Sag Harbor), Shelter Island, Southampton, and Westhampton Beach – and F.L.A.G.S., the Foreign Language Academy for Global Studies, in the Bronx.

The result is a potpourri of earnest, emotional, and sometimes very funny scenes in which sparkles of real wit and some promising performances shine through. Not unsurprisingly, comedy trumped tragedy in terms of dramatic success at the Friday dress rehearsal, when an enthusiastic student audience supported their peers' efforts with deafening applause.

"Lucky" by Chelsea Stoutenburgh, Pierson H.S., with Tanya Doggwiler and Emily Feinberg in a standout performance as Amanda, directed by Jacqui Leader: Two sisters en route to a planned bank heist that will get them out of Tuscaloosa for good accidentally run over a terrorist with a $10 million alive-or-dead reward. Amanda asks, "Why do I have to figure out everything?" Says her older but unwiser sister, "Because you graduated high school!"

"Superbowl Tickets," by Nick Halliday, Bridgehampton H.S., with DeShawn Brumsey and Michael Smith, directed by Bea Alda: Two buddies watching football on TV argue over a winning ticket for Superbowl seats that tests their friendship. Insight into bro-to-bro ethics: "You already screwed the girl, so why are you being so nice to her?"



"Shades of Gray," by Jason Dylan Nower, Southampton H.S., with the playwright and Karrin Marie Varucene, directed by Mindy Washington: A boy starts filming his own suicide note – "A slash, a little ounce of pain, and then nothing" – on a camcorder, but after cutting his finger lets his sister change his mind.

"The Knight and the Dragon," by James Carr, Westhampton Beach H.S., with Brendan Dickson and Cate Hulme, directed by Joe Minutillo: A naive knight with quest list in hand ("Rescue damsel in distress, check; find dragon, check....") is offered tea and cookies by the wily dragon he has been sent to slay in this imaginative, hilarious, and persuasively performed fairytale spoof. The knight confesses that he used to be the court jester, and his precursor turns out to be named Sir Fallsalot. Knight to dragon: "You can talk?" Dragon: "If I couldn't, this conversation would be rather boring, wouldn't it?"

"Jump," by Melissa Mundy, Shelter Island H.S., with Emily Larsen and Mary Grace Sheppard, directed by Tom Gustin: In a highly intellectualized dialogue, two jigsaw puzzle pieces argue the virtues of fitting in versus the frightening freedom of breaking away and jumping out of the box. "You don't understand – you're a middle piece!" (No edge?)

"Set Me Free," by Lyndalis Torres, F.L.A.G.S., with Melissa Allen and Funmi Adeyeye, directed by John Beuscher: A girl mourning at her sister's grave is visited by the sister's ghost, who pleads for understanding and forgiveness for their addict mother. Angry daughter: "When she threw me out, all I lost was sleep."

"Don't Interrupt Me When I'm Speaking to Myself," by Emily Feinberg, Pierson H.S., with M. Paige Ruiz and Joe Winchell, directed by Mary Hygom: In this charming and amusingly portrayed what she says/what he's thinking, what he says/what she's thinking comedy, two teens try to learn to listen to each other long enough to actually make a date. Musing on such imponderables as "I wonder if I could still play soccer if I had one eye?" and why "Three of our biggest political leaders are named Bush, Dick, and Colin," the two actors make an awkwardly appealing couple.

broadway theatre review: wicked... by jan silver

American musical theater has veered off in several directions since its "golden years" of 1943 (Oklahoma!) through 1968 when Hair introduced the song-driven, almost plotless style. Then came Andrew Lloyd Webber's musical anthems and the musical-as-spectacle to compete with special-effects films. (Other directions include Stephen Sondheim's later musicals, and smaller musicals like Avenue Q or Urinetown.) The new musical Wicked, which opened recently at the Gershwin Theatre, is a spectacle.

Wicked has outstanding lead performers–Kristin Chenoweth, Idina Menzel, Joel Grey, Norbert Leo Butz and Carole Shelley–plus a gargantuan set, dramatic costumes, energetic choreography, a somewhat interesting story but, alas, only workmanlike songs. How one wishes there were one or two memorable songs to accompany all the effort undertaken to stage this musical.

The story comes from Gregory Maguire's book, adapted for the stage by Stephen Schwartz and Winnie Holzman, about what happened in the Land of Oz before Dorothy arrived. By the end of the show, we know how the ruby slippers, Tin Man, Cowardly Lion and Straw Man came to be, but there's hardly one singable song, unless it's the archly simplistic "Popular" sung in knowingly high-camp style by Ms. Chenoweth as Galinda (the Good Witch's original name).

The show begins with the Wicked Witch of the West's death and then flashes back to show her life in Oz and how it intersects with Galinda's. The young baby, Elphaba, is green at birth. Rejected by her parents, she is nonetheless intelligent and talented, growing into a lonely young woman (Menzel) with magical powers who becomes responsible for her wheelchair-bound sister. Green Elphaba meets blonde Galinda when they are forced to become roommates at Shiz University.

Wicked

Chenoweth, best known as Sally for her 1999 Tony Award-winning performance in You're A Good Man, Charlie Brown, sparkles as the spoiled and sweetly conceited Galinda. Idina Menzel, the original Maureen (Mimi) in Rent (La Boheme), has the darker, quieter role of Elphaba, but she is the Wicked of the title and has the big voice and powerful stage presence to hold her own.

Joel Grey is pixielike as the Wizard of Oz, still the classic song-and-dance man in his one brief solo "A Sentimental Man." Carole Shelley is funny and commanding as Madame Morrible, the head of Shiz and the Wizard's right-hand woman. Norbert Leo Butz is the two witches' love interest, Fiyero, who gets to sing throwaway lyrics such as "Living is painless for the brainless." Michelle Federer (Nessarose), Christopher Fitzgerald (Boq) and William Youmans (Dr. Dillamond) are strong in supporting roles.

Eugene Lee's set is formidable. A huge dragon sits atop the proscenium arch and becomes part of a "Time Dragon Clock" when the curtain opens. The stage is filled with gears of all sizes and Galinda floats down in a bubble as the show begins. Other special effects include the flying monkeys and Elphaba's rising in "No Good Deed."

Susan Hilferty's costumes are a fantasy of colors, shapes and sizes, enhanced by Tom Watson's wig and hair designs, Kenneth Posner's lighting, Tony Meola's sound design and Elaine J. McCarthy's projections. Wayne Cilento did the musical staging/choreography for the large cast, assisted by James Lynn Abbott. William David Brohn orchestrated Stephen Schwartz's music and lyrics. Stephen Oremus leads the orchestra, and Joe Mantello, as director, captains this large cast and crew.

Wicked plays Wednesday through Saturday evenings at 8 p.m., Tuesday at 7 p.m., with matinees on Wednesday, Saturday and Sunday. It is suitable for children six and older. Tickets ($40-100) are available at the Gershwin Theatre, 222 West 51st Street, online at www.ticketmaster.com, or by calling 212-307-4100 or 1-800-755-4000.

To register for the run, call Alternatives at 631-283-4440. Walkers are also included in this event.

This year's East Hampton Historical Society Holiday House Tour features six homes in the modern, historic and neo-classic styles. This is a self-guided tour on Saturday from 1 to 4:30 p.m. Tickets are $30 individual, $75 for two patrons and $150 for benefactors. Benefactors are invited to a kick-off party at the historic Grey Gardens on Friday evening. Call 631-324-6850 for tickets.

Silvia Lehrer's Cooking Column

"Cook the whole dinner the day before and go straight to the turkey sandwich on Turkey day." Now where did I hear that? A sentiment, I'm certain, shared by many. A good turkey sandwich, layered with neatly carved turkey slices, moist onion, herb and bread stuffing, chunky cranberry relish, topped with sprightly greens and slathered with horseradish mayonnaise truly makes my mouth water. Yet I would never surrender the significance of sharing the traditions of giving thanks, with the big bird at center stage, on Thanksgiving Day. There's plenty of time on the weekend following Turkey day to enjoy leftovers in many guises.

Brunch on turkey hash with poached eggs incorporating sautéed onion, cooked potatoes, or any leftover vegetables and stuffing. Gently poached eggs can be prepared ahead and kept refrigerated in a bowl of cold water. To warm them place in a strainer and lower them into a pan of simmering water about 1 minute. Drain on paper towels and serve. If lunch is your preference, strips of roasted turkey, carrots and snow peas in garlic sauce atop a crispy noodle pancake with Asian overtones is a deliciously satisfying one-dish meal.

There is something gratifying, at least in a practical sense, about enjoying leftovers in new and tasty ways, while making room in the refrigerator.

TURKEY HASH

Leftovers make quick and easy work for a tasty hash.
Serves 4-6

2 tablespoons unsalted butter
1 tablespoon vegetable oil
1/2 cup finely chopped onion
3 cups diced cold turkey
3 cups finely chopped, cooked potatoes and/or leftover vegetables
Coarse (kosher) salt and freshly ground pepper to taste
1 cup cold stuffing
1/3 - 1/2 cup chicken or turkey broth
4-6 poached eggs
Tabasco sauce
Chopped parsley

Preheat oven to 350 degrees.

1. Melt butter with the oil in a large skillet, add onions and saute until translucent, about 3-4 minutes. Add turkey, potatoes, and/or vegetables, stuffing and stir to mix. Stir in broth as needed and season to taste with salt and pepper. Fold the ingredients in the pan and mix well.

2. Transfer mixture to a lightly buttered baking dish or in four to six individual greased baking dishes. Bake covered for 20 minutes. Remove from oven, arrange poached eggs on top, sprinkle with Tabasco sauce and parsley, and serve at once.

ROAST TURKEY WITH NOODLE PANCAKE AND GARLIC SAUCE

Serves 4-6

1/2 pound vermicelli or spaghettini
1/4 cup sliced scallions, white and light green parts
4 tablespoons vegetable or peanut oil

Garlic sauce
3 large cloves garlic
1 cup chicken or turkey broth
2 tablespoons low-sodium soy sauce
1/4 teaspoon snipped dried red pepper flakes
2 teaspoons cornstarch

For the turkey
3 carrots, peeled then cut into long strips
1/4 - 1/3 pound snow peas, trimmed and halved diagonally
3 cups diced roasted turkey

1. Prepare pancake: Cook the pasta in salted boiling water for 4-5 minutes until less than al dente. Drain and quickly run the pasta under cold water to stop the cooking. Transfer to a clean kitchen towel and pat dry. In a bowl toss pasta with scallions and 1 tablespoon oil.

2. In a 12-inch non-stick skillet heat remaining 3 tablespoons oil over medium high heat. Put in the pasta mixture and flatten with spatula, shaping it into a large round. Cover and cook over low heat, shaking pan occasionally, about 10 minutes or until golden brown and crisp on the bottom. Adjust heat as necessary. Invert pancake on a flat baking sheet and slide back into skillet. Cook other side about 6 minutes longer. Keep warm in a 180 – degree oven.

3. Meanwhile put garlic, broth, soy and pepper flakes in a bowl. Place cornstarch in a small bowl and stir in 1 tablespoon of the seasoned broth to dissolve the cornstarch and stir back into the bowl.

4. Pour garlic sauce into the same skillet the pancake cooked in. Add carrots and snow peas and bring to the edge of a boil. Cook stirring about 2 minutes or until sauce thickens and vegetables are barely tender. Add turkey, stir to mix and cook 1 - 2 minutes longer. Cut pancake into wedges, top with the turkey mixture and serve hot.

THE ULTIMATE TURKEY SANDWICH

Serves 4 - 6

4 slices ciabatta bread
8 -10 thin slices roasted turkey breast
1/2 cup left over bread stuffing
4 tablespoons cranberry relish
Small handful baby lettuce, washed and dried
1 tablespoon prepared horseradish mixed with 2-3 tablespoons mayonnaise

1. Place bread slices on work space. Top two slices with equally divided turkey slices, bread stuffing, cranberry relish and equally divided greens. Spread opposite bread slices with a mixture of horseradish mayonnaise, equally divided and cover the layered sandwich. Cut each sandwich in half with a sharp bread knife and serve.

Well coffee lovers, if you haven't already noticed, Chock full o' Nuts has recently moved into Southampton (20 County Rd. 39). The quick serve coffee shop opens at 5:30 a.m. every day and serves into the evening. All baked goods and desserts are made on premise. Omelets, eggs and breakfast sandwiches are served, with prices in the range of $2.95 to $3.45. The rest of the day's menu features burgers and Hebrew National hot dogs; grilled panini's, salads, wraps, sandwiches featuring Boar's Head meat and Carnegie Deli's own pastrami and corned beef. All baked goods are under $3. Stop by for a bite or just grab a cup of Chock full o' Nuts renowned fresh brewed coffee. For details call 287-6016.

The Family Service League's 12th annual Great Chefs of Long Island event is set to take place on December 7th from 2 to 5 p.m. at the Crest Hollow Country Club in Woodbury, Long Island. East End restaurant participants include Crazy Dog, George Martin, Seafood Barge, Southampton Publick House, Tierra Mar and Tellers. Vineyard participants will consist of Bedell Cellars, Corey Creek Vineyards, Martha Clare Vineyards, Ospreys Dominion Vineyards, Paumanok Vineyards, Peconic Bay Winery, Pellegrini Vineyards, Pugliese Vineyards, Ternhaven Cellars and The Wolffer Estate. Tickets are $125 per person in advance or $150 at the door. Call 427-3700 ext. 255 for reservations or for more information.

Due to the sold-out success of the inaugural East End Food & Wine Awards gala last spring, founders Shari Alexander and John Bills, editors of the Long Island Wine Gazette and Todd Jacobs, host, chef and owner of Tierra Mar, have announced that the second annual vineyard and restaurant competition will take place on April 18, 2004, at the Atlantica Ballroom in Westhampton Beach. East End Food & Wine Awards is a non-profit corporation founded to identify outstanding achievement in winemaking and in the use of regional products by local restaurants. All profits of the evening go to Suffolk County Community College, Culinary Department; Earth Pledge; and the Thanc Foundation, for throat, head, and neck cancer research. This year's hosts will be chef Eberhard Mueller (of Bayard's, and formerly of Lutece), Paulette Satur (of Satur Farms), and restaurateur/chef Tom Schaudel. Guests are encouraged to make their reservations early. For information, or if you are a restaurant owner, manager or chef that would like to enter your restaurant, call 725-3899. Entries must be in by December 3rd.

In case you were wondering, Alison by the Beach (537-7100) in Sagaponack will be open all winter Thursday through Sunday offering great nightly specials, as well as their usual dinner menu. Thursday is a warm Provencal bouillabaisse, Friday is a hearty lamb shepherds pie, Saturday offers up Robert's famous cassoulet, and Sunday's special will be a rich duck confit with lentils. All of the plat du jour's will be priced at $21 plus tax and gratuity. Also, don't forget Alison has a $19.95 two course prix fixe and a $26.95 three course prix fixe available all night Thursday and Sunday and until 7:15 on Friday and Saturday.

In East Hampton, Della Femina is available for private parties this holiday season. The North Main Street restaurant is offering a variety of holiday menus for gatherings of all sizes. Menus start at $24 per person. Holiday party menus include: steamed shrimp dumplings with Ponzu sauce; Milk Pail winesap apple and beet salad with gorgonzola, turkey figs and pistachio dressing; grilled lamb loin in truffle red wine sauce with parsley risotto and baby carrots; pan roasted black bass with saffron lemon grass broth, shrimp dumplings and kim chi; and dessert choices like pecan crème caramel with dried fruit compote and pecan walnut brittle; or croissant bread pudding with orange marmalade gelato and vincotto drizzle. For more info call 329-6666.

If you're looking for great comfort food on the North Fork, look no further. Since 1950 the Modern Snack Bar in Aquebogue has been serving up quick and easy treats for the whole family. Fresh soft shell crabs, stuffed flounder, bay scallops, roast LI duck, lobster salad, even prime rib - all accompanied by local wine and beer. Call 722-3655 or log on to www.modernsnackbar.com.

Dining In The Hamptons

Turducken (tur.DUK.en)

So what do you get when you take three birds, three stuffings, and put them all together? Turducken. And why would you want to do this? Because food should be fun and Turducken is delicious. Chef Paul Prudhomme describes it as being like "one of those wonderful exciting, juicy kisses."

Though there is some controversy about who was behind the bird in a bird in a bird concept. In 1982, Newsweek reported Chef Paul Prudhomme as claiming credit for inventing this sumptuous Cajun absurdity. This was confirmed by Jeffrey Steingarten, in his book It Must Have Been Something I Ate. He writes that in the 60s Prudhomme was experimenting with boning a turkey to create an easier method of stuffing, roasting, and slicing, only to discover that the ratio of meat to stuffing was too high. He then made the Turducken.

However, Widley Herbert, Jr., of Hebert's Specialty Meats in Maurice, Louisiana and Tulsa, Oklahoma, claims he invented Turducken when a customer brought in three birds and asked to have them stuffed in one another. This claim is documented as being made in 1985 which puts Chef Prudhomme as originator; however, no mention of Turducken can be made without mentioning Herbert, because he sells thousands of Turduckens every holiday season, making him the Turducken King, of sorts.

Turducken is made with a 15-lb. de-boned turkey, stuffed with a de-boned duck, stuffed with a de-boned chicken, and three different stuffings, typically, oyster, cornbread, and sausage, respectively put between each layer. It looks like a turkey (or it's supposed to) from the outside, however when it's sliced you see a rainbow of meats and stuffing, similar to a terrine or ballottine.

Making Turducken is not for the faint of heart, and can be a 16-hour process. Boning one bird is not easy, and boning three birds requires an adventurous spirit and can take the amateur quite some time (approximately an hour or two per bird). You could call your local butcher and ask him to do this for you. Then you make your own stuffings, and season to your liking.

To assemble the Turducken, lay the boned turkey flat. (The butcher should have left the wings and the ends of the leg bones so that when you are finished there is a resemblance to a turkey.) The first stuffing is spread on the turkey. Then the duck is laid upon the stuffing.

It is covered with its stuffing. The same with the chicken, and its stuffing. At this point, the whole thing is rolled up and sewn together with an upholstery needle. A note of warning, this sewing is a two-person job!

I found one recipe on the web that allowed for 6 hours of cooking. However, Paul Prudhomme's and two other web sites called for slow cooking at a lower heat for about 13 hours, until the internal temperature reaches the magic 165 degrees at which poultry becomes safe to eat. 10 – 12 hours later, your birds come out of the oven, you make your gravy and you're off to the table. Simple right?

Or, you can order from various butchers in Cajun County, over the Internet, or locally from Citerella. All are stuffed, ready to roast, and cost from $85 – $150.

So that's Turducken. Its true origin will forever remain a mystery, though in South Africa, there is a similar feast with ostrich, turkey, duck, and chicken. In Russia, it's ox, calf, lamb, turkey, goose, and chicken. The French? Well, they have been showing off their little stuffed birds, and bigger birds too, for a very long time. And we have Turducken.

The Tale of Turducken

(with apologies to The Old Lady Who Swallowed the Fly)
I know an old cajun who poultry preferred;
"Upon my word, I do love a bird!"
He oft would sigh.
And when one Thanksgiving he found in his stock
A farm-fed and fine-feathered tom turkey cock,
He said to himself, "It is quirky; but, gosh,
If a bird in the hand is worth two in the bush,
Then three done as one would be really a rush!
Perhaps I'll try!"
He trussed up the turkey, when down from on high
Along came a quacker, a gift from the sky
In on the fly.
Then in walked a bantam, a little red hen,
Petite, plump, and pretty, right out of the pen;
Said he, "I'll buy!"
A daring idea our cajun had struck;
So, never a cook to go by the book,
He plucked and he tucked and the bones out he took;
He hollowed the turkey to fit the duck,
He hollowed the duck to hold the cluck,
And in between, savory stuffing he stuck,
A tri-fowl pie.
He roasted his terrine, disdaining to fry,
Then quite nicely sliced, _served it up with a cry:
"Three and plenty snack birds, baked triple-ply – Turducken! Try!"

The Garden At Rock Cottage by Lance Brilliantine

Simplicity and Sparkle of Amaryllis

No holiday seems complete without amaryllis flowers, so sparkling and cheerful are the blooms. They evoke the holiday spirit, but they are also a great houseplant in the fall and winter.

We indulge each year in some of the new colors that developed, because they add a dazzling touch and are a great conversation piece. And amaryllis is very easy to grow.

Our research shows that wild amaryllis probably came from Chile or Peru. The bulb was first gathered from the Andes Mountains of Chile by a physician, Eduard Poeppig, who discovered the plant in 1828. The plant was named after a shepherdess from Greek mythology. The word amaryllis means "sparkling" and refers to the attention-grabbing bloom.

Amaryllis

Easy to find, its popularity has grown over the years, as has the variety of colors available. We have found that Wittendale's Florist and Greenhouses on Newtown Lane in East Hampton carries some of the best-grown examples and offers the widest variety.

Amaryllis is a large plant with bulbs from three-to-five inches in diameter. Plants grow to a height of about 20-24 inches with blooms measuring up to six inches wide. Colors range from pure white to soft pink, and from salmon to dark red. There are a number of striped varieties as well as dwarf ones (Amaryllis gracilis) that produce multiple, but smaller, blooms. For the holidays, look for "Zanzabar," an orange-salmon, "Intokaza," a bright white with green throat, "Double Six," a bold red, and "Miracle," a mahagony red.

Bulbs bloom from fall until spring and commence blooming five-to-eight weeks after they are planted. Sequencing the planting produces blooms from late fall until spring.

If you don't buy blooming plants, search for large, firm bulbs that only show the scars of old foliage. Plant the bulbs in light, well-drained potting soil that includes some peat moss. Pots must have good drainage and be about three inches in circumference larger than the bulb itself. Plant bulbs so about a third of each bulb shows above the soil.

Water and place newly planted bulbs in a sunny location where daytime temperatures average between 65º-75º F. Nighttime temperatures can be five-to-ten degrees cooler. Water the bulbs sparingly until growth begins or when the soil is dry. Keep soil moist, never wet.

If you turn the pots every few days the foliage and flower stalks will be balanced and centered. Varieties with larger blooms need to be staked as they tend to fall over without support.

When flower buds begin to open, move plants to a location where they receive less direct light. This will prolong flowering and bring out the vibrant flower colors. Remove flowers as they fade to prevent seed formation. This practice also promotes maximum flowering in remaining blossoms.

If you intend to discard the bulb once it has bloomed you don't need to fertilize. If you want to reuse the bulb in succeeding years, as we do, fertilize the plant with soluble houseplant fertilizer that contains some trace elements such as iron and magnesium. Fertilize every five weeks or so while the bulb is actively growing.

We have been successful at getting amaryllis bulbs to rebloom for several years. To do this, place pots in a sunny, well-ventilated location when flowering is completed and continue watering/feeding regularly (every five weeks or so) to promote vigorous foliage. The bulbs ought to increase in size by about a half inch each year

Fabulous Floors

We've come a long way in luxurious home décor. Floors, for instance, are no longer limited to hard wood, ceramic tile or carpeting. Today there are many great products that will enhance and personalize your home floors.

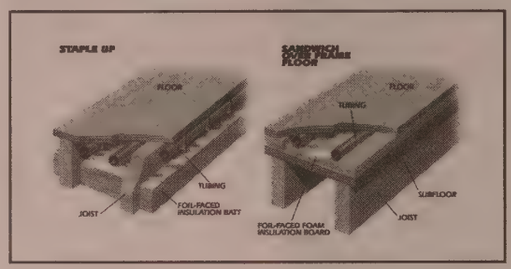
While a towel warmer in the bathroom is a starting place for luxury and comfort during our Northeast winters, floors with programmable radiant heat will warm the walls, ceiling and all surfaces for a coziness better than extra sweaters and blankets. Just set the thermostat in the bathroom to start the heat an hour before rising and then be treated to a snug and toasty awakening.

In addition to the bathroom, radiant flooring can be utilized in any room, whether the floor is stone, wood, vinyl, tile, carpet or laminate. A kitchen is even more inviting as the heat rises to greet the family in the morning. They'll be "walking on sunshine" instead of having ice cold feet. Happily, contractors find both the hydronic and electric radiant heat products easy to install.

Radiant heating was originally used by the early Romans to make enclosed spaces more comfy. This type of application turns wall, ceilings, floors and large surface areas into heat radiators by controlling the rate at which they lose heat. The value of your home also increases, because it eliminates the potential danger of respiratory problems stemming from forced hot air systems.

With hydronic systems, warm water circulates through tubing that is embedded in the floor, with heat rising to warm all surfaces in the room. Opening the door to the outside in January doesn't let all the heat escape, since the surfaces themselves remain evenly warm. With other heating systems, the warm air rises towards the ceiling, but with radiant heat the warmth holds in the room. A radiant system is also very quiet. There are no fans, banging pipes or ductwork.

Another interesting choice in flooring options is a cork floor. Cork is never icy cold, even without radiant heat. Cork flooring is naturally resistant to mold and mildew in addition to being hypoallergenic. The long-wearing, low-maintenance, repairable product comes from renewable, natural resources. Some of the cork oak trees, which grow around the Mediterranean basin, have their bark harvested every nine years and still they live up to 200 years.



Cork flooring can also come to the rescue in tricky situations of handling older asbestos flooring. The old floor can be covered with cork, to avoid the dangers of removing the asbestos product. The products are easily installed and they are prefinished. Glueless planks can be installed with cork attached underneath to serve as sound proofing material. Globus Cork is a company that manufactures cork flooring in a wide range of colors, sizes and patterns. Actually, because of the thermal and insulative properties of cork it isn't just great for flooring but also can be applied to ceilings and walls.

Bamboo too is a versatile material that can be installed on the ceiling, wainscoting, walls and floor. Mao, or ohwi bamboo that is used for flooring, grows abundantly in the Fujian and Zhejiang provinces in China (the shoots are also harvested for cooking!). Because of its tropical properties bamboo is denser and stronger than hardwoods and it can withstand moisture more readily.

With its straight grain, bamboo flooring is stable, elegant and strong. It is appropriate in both commercial and residential applications. The unfinished unlacquered flooring should be waxed and polished, or coated after it is put down. The finished lacquered flooring comes in a range of hues, from fresh bamboo to a carbonized color. A dark coffee color is achieved after processing under high temperatures. These are lacquered and finished prior to installation.

Tapic bamboo flooring is a thinner variety of flooring with one layer, while the other types have three layers. It is less costly and can be customized in pleasing patterns, available in the natural and carbonized hues.

Bamboo is as hard as maple and it is fifty percent more stable and harder than red oak. Bamboo is a grass that matures in 4 or 5 years, providing an unstoppable resource. Bamboo flooring is treated during manufacturing to make it resistant to insect and mildew damage. It also has to be treated to comply with commercial and residential fire prevention standards. It can be nailed down or glued. Once installed, bamboo can be maintained with a damp mop or a vacuum cleaner.

Computer aided design can assist a home renovator or builder in planning the perfect flooring and to ensure the exact measurements are applied. Most showrooms offer this service.

HEALTH & BEAUTY

Illuminations by Barbara Jo Howard

Happy Thanksgiving! Let's talk turkey and I don't mean the bird; I mean giving "the bird" to "turkey" (as in "loser") products or rituals we have endured in the name of beauty. Some are, thankfully, gone, such as brushing our hair one hundred strokes every night, and then setting it with beer cans, while others, like teased beehive hair, frosted lips, and winged eyeliner, sometimes re-appear on the fashion runaways, proving what was "out" can now be "retro."

Looking back, here are ten turkeys that I am happy to roast.

10. Painted on eyelashes. Twiggy, the hip, androgynous model of the 60s, portrayed a baby doll image by meticulously painting on both lower and upper lashes. They took hours to apply and smudged in a blink.

9. Orange Juice Can Curlers. Waist-length, straight, shiny hair was all the rage thanks to Cher. Curls were literally ironed out or rolled on to large juice cans and fastened with bobby pins. (Does anyone even own a bobby pin anymore?) I literally slept 4-inches off my pillow.

8. Dynel falls. These synthetic half-wigs provided the perfect bewitching Samantha-like flip or pageboy. Slip one on and cover the hairline with a stretchable headband. However, don't do anything physical like let loose and dance, or you may literally lose your hair and provide a whole new meaning to "split ends."

7. Sun In. Forbidden by mothers, this contraband was secretly purchased in drug stores and sprayed on our brunette locks as we sat in the sun for hours dreaming of turning surfer blonde. The reality was a nightmare as we took stock of clown-like, dry, dyed Ronald McDonald orange locks.

6. Frosted Streaks. These white "highlights" were painfully achieved by donning a rubber bathing cap with a million little holes. Then the "beautician" would take a crocheting needle and literally poke through the cap, snag a strand of hair and weave it up through the hole. This eye-tearing process would go for hours until all the hair to be "frosted" was torn through the cap holes and then bleached, revealing a look more AARP-gray than California Girl-gold.

5. Dippity-Do. This pink goop allowed us to set our hair and keep the curl forever. Dippity Do was strong. So strong that after the curlers were removed the hair still retained the roller shape. It did not move. It did not shake. It was stiff and firm and could hold in force five winds.

4. Toni Perms. Oh! These were simply divine if you wanted to look like Shirley Temple on crack. A home permanent package that smelled like a chemistry lab, it could burn the hair right down to the roots. More tears have been shed over the shame of having to go to school with the aftermath of a Toni Perm Gone Bad than the break-up of any beau.

3. Pssst Dry shampoo. Forget showering and wrecking that beautiful, once-a-week salon-do. Why lather up when one can sprinkle in a powder and lightly brush out to remove oil? Pssst...users had smelly heads!

2. Epilady hair removal. Talk about torture.

Police Blotter

As the seasons pass and the months grow colder, thieves on the East End have fewer and fewer people to steal from. Thus, below are reports of bored thieves. An unknown bored thief struck a Montauk restaurant last Wednesday. The owner of the establishment discovered a newly-sided exterior wall was missing its plywood. He told police that all together, with materials and labor, it would cost $650 to replace.

* * *

All over the Tri-State area police protect citizens from the occasional car-jacking. In the Hamptons worries of the next lumber-jacking grow. A local firewood thief may soon find himself in the hot seat as police investigate a crime in East Hampton. Last week a Deep Six Drive woman returned from work to find an entire cord of firewood missing from her driveway. She told police the pile cost her $150.

* * *

An officer on patrol near Old Montauk Highway in East Hampton managed to stop a car thief from making a getaway. When the officer attempted to stop the 29-year-old Bellport man for speeding, the man pulled over and began running. According to police reports, the officer then cut him off and was able to subdue the man. After searching, inspecting and photographing the vehicle, police turned the almost-stolen car over to its owner. The Bellport man was charged with fourth degree grand larceny and aggravated unlicensed operaton of a motor vehicle.

Southampton Town Police have decided to crack down on ATV operation on private and and Pine Barren properties. A 37-year-old Franklin Square man and two Oceanside men, ages 28 and 29, were arrested in East Quogue on Sunday. Apparently the three men were illegally operating their ATVs in Spinny Hills, a Southampton Town-owned portion of land in East Quogue, and were later released on appearence tickets. Police say they will continue to take action against illegal off-roaders.

When most people think of raking leaves they don't think "lock the doors." After hearing this report however, you may change your train of thought. On Friday, police received a call from a Speonk woman who had just come inside for refreshments after raking her lawn. She soon realized she wasn't alone as a man appeared from her bedroom. When she asked him to leave he stated that he was looking for his girlfriend; that's when she called the police. A K-9 unit was dispatched and an investigation began. Police soon tracked down a 36-year-old Speonk man and arrested him for second degree burglary.

GUYS AND LIES
Dear Dan,

The base level of moral fiber in our present administration has passed the point of being merely embarrassing; it is downright frightening. Are we in fact trying to compete for the dubious honor of being as evil as those we pretend it is our mission to rehabilitate or destroy? Besides the front line of our own home grown "Evil Doers" such as Cheney, Rumsfeld, Rove, Woflfowitz, Ashcroft, Perle, Abrams, and Card, to name a few, there are the "Evilish "Doers" that are attracted to this administration, as are flies to.....whatever obvious fetid things to which flies are attracted.

One is John Poindexter. Does anyone still remember the retired Navy Admiral who lost his job as National Security Advisor while serving Ronald Reagan and was convicted of conspiracy, lying to Congress, defrauding the government, and destroying evidence in the Iran Contra scandal, was sentenced and put in jail? During the Reagan Administration, he and Oliver North were guilty of illegally selling weapons to the Iranians (temporarily, one of Bush's Axis of Evil), then took the money and funneled it to the brutal "Contra" army that we had illegally built in Nicaragua, Central America. As if the Bush Administration needed yet another liar, he was recruited to the newly created Information Awareness Office (IAO) to gather intelligence through electronic sources like the Internet, phone and FAX lines. Our very own, fraudulent, ex-con, Big Brother is once again with his peers, but now serving the Bush Administration. Elliot Abrams, John Negroponte, and Otto Reich have also been rewarded with key positions by Bush, in spite of, or because of their complicity in the nefarious deception of the American public. What a reprehensible crew to offer the world as representing "America".

So this is the makeup of our present Administration and the lies and deceptions continue, on and on. If it weren't so lamen table, it would be laughable.

HONORABLE MENTION
Dear Dan,

The death of Justine Cutting Cushing should not pass without notice. She is a descendent of the Cutting family that donated the Cutting Arboretum in Oakdale, and her children are active in philanthropic activities in New York. Her husband founded the ski resort Squaw Valley and they had three children Justine, Alexandra and Lilly.

She was at one time a formidable golf player and won tournaments around Long Island. She is in the Social Register, and resided in New York, Brookville and Southampton. She was a great lady, who grew up in an era when to be a gracious but tough lady was held in high esteem. She was both.

HOUSE AND HOME
Dear Dan,

I'd like to suggest a news story about East Hampton Christmas house tour. Getaway House is being decorated by three famous New York City stylists and style editors and calling on major retailers (Smith & Hawken) to supply china, ornaments, etc. All this because proprietor and bachelor at Getaway House was at a loss when it comes to decorating. So he called on his lady friends. Stylists will give out how-to-pamphlet to tour goers. Are you interested?

if done properly. (Bulbs naturally decrease as a result of flowering.) You can place bulbs outdoors in warmer weather in a semi-shaded location. Be sure to protect bulbs as fall approaches since they are sensitive to frost.

When foliage dies back in September or October, store bulbs in their pots in a cool, dry location, out of direct sunlight. Stop watering or feeding at this time as bulbs tend to rot with any attention while dormant.

Signs of new growth will appear in about two-to-three months – longer if stored in a quite cool place. Then, replace the top inch or so of the potting soil with new soil combined with some bone meal or bulb booster. Be careful not to damage new shoots or roots during this process. Once again, place the bulbs in a warm, sunny location and water/fertilize as before. Repot bulbs when pot bound. The process can be repeated for a long time. We compete with ourselves to get the bulbs to rebloom, and have successfully had repeat blooms for up to five years.

We are such amaryllis enthusiasts that every year we have more and more pots to tend! Their easy success and magic brighten our rooms from fall to spring . Every home ought to experience the allure!

This mechanism was designed for the masochist. Its rotary metal spirals would literally yank unwanted hair from the root, follicle by follicle. The perfect stocking stuffer for Saddam.

And last, but not least, the number 1 turkey of all time: Baby oil and Iodine. This home brew tinted the skin as we basted ourselves in preparation for frying our skin in the quest of the perfect tan. Further sizzling was achieved by holding up an aluminum foil reflector to catch every cancerous ray.

Today, I am thankful that we have self-tanners that provide bronzing through safe applications. I am thankful that we are focusing on eating better and working out to stay fit. I am thankful that we are beginning to recognize that a healthy body is a beautiful body. Take care of yours and have a Happy Thanksgiving!

Special thanks to my brilliant hairstylist/colorist, Sheila Krasniqi at Gurney's(631-668-2345), who helped trigger many of the memories, in addition to my sister-in-law, Mary, and my friends, Barbara, Iris, Leonie, and Mel, as well as Kelly, Maria, Robin and James who all contributed to roasting these turkeys.
